BENSON SEEKS NEW TAX TALKS

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister Edgar Benson today suggested another meeting with provincial finance ministers this fall before the government begins to make final decisions on its plan to revise the Income Tax Act.

Sources at the federal-provincial premiers meeting said Benson also promised the premiers and their provincial treasurers he would meet them again next spring, as soon as the government introduces in Parliament its definitive legislation revising the act.

The government now hopes to have its white paper proposals rewritten in the form of draft legislation by next March or April. The finance ministers meeting probably will be held in November or December this year.

The Constitution: They'll Try Again Next Year

Times News Services

Ottawa and the provinces have shifted the emphasis from writing a new Canadian constitution to amending the existing British North America Act.

This was the only major accomplishment of two days of federal-provincial talks in Ottawa ending Tuesday. Agreement was reached to pursue an amending formula at two meetings in 1971 — in February in Ottawa and June in Victoria.

Speed-Up Attempt Endorsed

And there also was general agreement — with no specific pledges — to try to speed-up the whole constitutional review process and "keep the public involved and fully informed of progress."

By renewing the emphasis on an amending formula, the constitutional talks appeared to be reverting to their start when it was decided to leave such a formula until after all other constitutional changes had been agreed on. But Prime Minister Trudeau and most of the premiers discounted such suggestions.

Most of the delegates had supported arguments advanced by Premier John Robarts of Ontario that a formula should be established so that constitutional changes can be made in Canada as they are agreed upon, rather than waiting for the completion of the over-all constitutional review.

Robarts said that agreement on an entirely new constitution will be "a long time coming." Premier Ross Thatcher of Saskatchewan said it wouldn't be in his lifetime.

The last time an amending formula was high in the news was in 1964 when the so-called Fulton-Favreau formula was finally shot down by Quebec after several years of federal-provincial negotiations.

Over-All Review to Continue

But this time, other constitutional matters won't be held up in the process. The over-all review will continue, as now, and Trudeau said that delegations at this conference supported plans to conclude the job "as rapidly as possible."

After five constitutional meetings, all of them with extensive publicity, the leaders appeared sensitive about not having any easily-digestable announcements to make about agreements on specific subjects.

Premier Robarts said Tuesday night it is important that the public realize the complexity of the job and that worthwhile progress is being quickly made in the search for an updated constitution.

Unless some rapid progress is made, said Trudeau, it will be necessary to "dampen the enthusiasm of expectation."

Officials expressed fears privately that unless some concrete results can be pointed out soon, the public will lose all interest in the seemingly endless string of constitutional talks.

Trudeau has said frequently that he favors public involvement in the constitutional review process.

Anti-Pollution Drive Set

Apart from the amending formula, this conference decided to study possible new machinery for handling intergovernmental relations, and also decided to spur on the work of the continuing committee of officials by giving it more specific directions.

In the area of pollution control, said a communique, it was agreed to study the constitutional aspects of environmental management while continuing to co-operate in anti-pollution measures under the existing constitutional arrangements.

Virtually all the premiers ended the constitutional discussions with some degree of satisfaction over the course of events.

Premier Robert Bourassa of Quebec, saying he found the negotiations "satisfactory," also said that his province "is less isolated than I thought."

While Quebec had some specific demands, because of WOODEN PADDLE held by Toronto trustee Graham Scott is used on emotionally-disturbed children at Brant Street School. Trustees were told the use of the paddle was considered "therapeutic reinforcement-type therapy" and was done with the knowledge of school board officials.

Emotionally Disturbed Spanked With Paddle

TORONTO (CP) — A public school principal acknowledged Tuesday he and two teachers had used a plywood paddle to spank emotionally disturbed children and had washed their mouths with soap and water for swearing.

Robert Holmeshaw, former principal of Brant Street public school and now principal of the proposed Oak Street school, told a meeting of the management committee of the board of education that he personally applied the 14-inch paddle.

Ronald Jones, director of the city board of education, told the committee the paddling was considered part of a "therapeutic reinforcement-type therapy" and was done with the knowledge of board officials.

Board rules forbid the use of anything except a strap for corporal punishment. The committee asked that a full report on the incidents at Brant be brought to the board.

Mitchell Lennox, acting assistant superintendent of public schools, told trustees the paddle was reported used 12 times on seven children at the Brant school during the last school year.

These children were in a special rehabilitation class for children aged 6 to 10 with emotional problems. The punishment was administered by the principal or a teacher before the whole class.

USED FOUL LANGUAGE

Mr. Holmeshaw said that in another classroom the children's mouths had been washed with soap and water three times because they used foul language.

"With two of them it worked marvellously—they stopped swearing," he said. "With one it had no effect."

With the paddle he had administered a sharp smack on the buttocks, never more than twice at a time.

Mr. Holmeshaw acknowledged that using the paddle was "bad judgment" but objected to being accused of being "a tyrant and beating kids."

"I wasn't," he said. "I was trying to bring about changes in behavior."

Curtis Urges Strong UBCM To Counteract Weak MLAs

By CLEMENT CHAPPLE
Times Staff

PENTICTON — Mayor Hugh Curtis of Saanich appealed today for a stronger organization of B.C. municipalities to overcome the inadequacy of provincial legislature members who he says don't understand municipal problems.

Curtis, outgoing president of the Union of B.C. Municipalities, said, in his president's report before delegates attending the union's annual convention, that a strong lobby must be formed to fill the provincial government in on municipal problems about which MLAs remain ignorant.

URGES MOVE

Curtis called on delegates to support his suggestion of moving UBCM offices to Victoria from New Westminster, a move which would also strengthen the lobbying power of the union.

The Saanich Mayor added that to be effective, UBCM permanent staff should be enlarged from its four members to meet the increased need.

In his prepared statement, Curtis said "it is somewhat startling to experience, first-hand, the rather profound lack of knowledge among a number of members of the Legislative Assembly with respect to this 'other level' of government."

Curtis did not blame all MLAs directly, saying that the increasing intricacy of municipal operations over the last 15 years has caused the situation. But the result was that "the rank and file provincial representative does not have a clear and concise understanding of local and regional government.

IGNORANCE CITED

Curtis singled out the province's regional government system as an area in which MLAs "on both sides of the house" are ignorant, "and there are some who don't have the slightest background

Army Officers Taking Over

Times News Services

AMMAN — King Hussein today fired his civilian cabinet and replaced it with loyal army officers who immediately declared martial law in Jordan.

Rebel guerrilla forces meanwhile united under extremist Yasser Arafat and pledged to fight the new regime to the end. The guerrillas are seeking all-out war against Israel while the Hussein regime is trying for a peace pact.

Arafat did not order an offensive but ordered his men to defy an order by King Hussein's new government and refuse to surrender their arms.

As the crisis deepened in Jordan, a top-level United States force, including the chairman of the joint chiefs of staff and President Nixon's national security adviser, met in Washington to consider the developments.

The Jordanian military government is headed by Brig. Mohammed Daoud, a Palestinian born near Jerusalem.

But the real power was invested in Field Marshal Habis Majali, British-trained Arab Legion officer, who was named military governor of the entire country.

With Middle East peace prospects looking dimmer by the hour, Israeli Premier Golda Meir flew to the United States today for talks with Nixon and other top U.S. officials.

DISCUSS SITUATION

She and Nixon were expected to discuss the Israeli military requests that triggered Egypt's denunciation of the United States.

Official sources reported Daoud said early today that the military government wanted to implement the latest ceasefire agreements with the guerrillas.

Observers in the Jordanian capital said it seemed clear that if the guerrillas rejected the olive branch, the new military government would not hesitate to move against them in a bid to end the government-commando crises once and for all.

Such a step could bring Jordan — already in a state of near-anarchy — into virtual civil war.

'Israel Broke Truce'—U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — United States officials say they believe Israel has violated the Middle East's ceasefire on one occasion in an effort to get photographs of alleged Egyptian violations.

Evidence available to the U.S., officials said, indicates that an Israeli reconnaissance plane flew over Egyptian territory to take pictures of anti-aircraft missile sites on the Egyptian side of the Suez canal front.

TORONTO (CP) — Ald. Robert Yuill has been voted the "most useless" member of North York borough council in a contest he called "reprehensible and irresponsible."

Long Strike Feared; Bargaining Posponed

DETROIT (AP) — Leonard Woodcock, United Auto Workers president, planned picket-line visits to rally union members today as the prospect loomed larger that the General Motors strike may be a long one.

Serious bargaining was postponed until Tuesday, union sources said, although both sides were to meet briefly today to work out an agenda for future talks.

The UAW had pulled nearly 344,000 workers off their jobs in Canada and the United States Tuesday in support of new contract demands.

Production continued at Ford Motor Co. and Chrysler Corp., where contracts also have expired but which have been granted at least temporary strike immunity by the UAW.

Whatever terms are reached at GM will set a pattern for settlements at Ford and Chrysler.

The union and the automaker put the price tag of the strike at more than $118 million a day, including lost wages and sales.

Meanwhile, at GM's car assembly plant at St. Therese, Que., workers said they are having no problems getting extra jobs in the bush or at a federal airport construction site 20 miles north.

Harold Wakefield, corporate manager of Duplate of Canada which employs 1,000 persons at its Oshawa and Hawkesbury plants, said most of its output of glass goes to GM and "if our customer is on strike that pretty well shuts us down."

TOT FINDS GUN, KILLS NEIGHBOR

HURST, Ill. (UPI) — A 3-year-old boy who found a loaded .22 calibre target pistol on the floorboard of his father's car shot a neighbor to death Tuesday night and wounded a boy.

Authorities said Roger Tennyson, 21, was struck four times by bullets fired by Jimmy Hawk.

David Tackett, 12, was struck in the hip by one bullet and was admitted to Holden Hospital at Carbondale.

Authorities said the Hawk boy fired all six shots in the pistol as Tennyson and Tackett approached him and tried to talk him into putting the gun down.

The boy had wandered into Tennyson's yard after finding the gun in the car of his father, Allen Hawk.

Share-Trading Probe Ordered

The B.C. Securities Commission has been ordered by Attorney-General Leslie Peterson to investigate share-trading in two companies of which his brother-in-law is a director.

The order also applies to other unnamed companies associated with Canada Kelp Ltd., which went into receivership Aug. 25, and Apollo Distributors Ltd., related firms headed by Harold Hine, a Vancouver lawyer.

Hine, who is the brother of Peterson's wife, Agnes, is chairman and chief executive officer of the two firms as well as of International Mutual Funds Ltd.

A statement from the Vancouver office of the Securities Commission, issued following first public knowledge of the investigation Tuesday, said there "has been no allegation of conversion or misappropriation or fraud relating to the funds or property or any of the companies named in the investigating order."

ONLY TRADING

The investigation "relates solely to the trading in shares of some of the companies."

"The commission emphasizes that its investigation has no bearing whatsoever on International Growth Fund, the mutual fund operated by International Mutual Funds Ltd."

Former B.C. recreation minister and Agent-General in London, Earle C. Westwood, is also a director of Canada Kelp and Apollo Distributors, according to the last directors' list filed with the Companies Office in May, 1969.

But Westwood said Tuesday he had been a director of Canada Kelp but resigned six months ago.

No shareholders list has been filed by the two companies.

STARTED IN 1967

W. S. Irwin, Securities Commission head, declined to name other companies included in the investigation order.

Canada Kelp was incorporated in 1967 as North Pacific Marine Products Ltd., with the aim of harvesting and processing kelp in the Queen Charlottes area.

The company tried unsuccessfully to sell a public issue of 500,000 shares at $5 each last fall and later entered into a financing arrangement with the Dillingham Corporation.

Dillingham financed a processing plant in the Queen Charlottes which resulted in Canada Kelp owing $1.5 million to it. Lesser amounts are owed to other companies.

During the summer Dillingham asked for a receiver to be appointed to manage Canada Kelp's affairs but has not started bankruptcy proceedings.

Directors listed for Canada Kelp in addition to Hine and Westwood, whose address is given as Nanaimo, are Mark. S. Millington of Burnaby, Dr. Nori Nishio of Nanaimo, and Harry Arvid Hansen, Richard Phillip Ott, and Donald E. Bennett, all of Vancouver.

Canada Kelp filed a report with the Securities Commission in June, 1970, showing 707,500 of the company's 1.3 million shares were held in a West German bank account. The report said 360,000 of those were in a voting trust in favor of Hine. Another 489,389 shares not held in the German account were also listed in a trust in favor of Hine.

Hine became a director of Canada Kelp in July, 1968 and Westwood, in May, 1969.

Hine became a director of Apollo in December, 1968, and Westwood in May, 1969.

On Sept. 2, Apollo turned over for $43,509 all stock in trade, goods and personal chattels and property to Hine and a company called Votae Holdings Corp. Ltd., a firm owned by Hine and his wife.

Hine declined comment.

In Vancouver, Dr. Arthur MacDonald, retired veterinarian, director of Apollo and an investor in Canada Kelp, said he sparked the investigation.

MacDonald said he approached the Securities Commission about a month ago because he "wasn't happy with the way business was being conducted." He would not elaborate.

Peterson, in Ottawa for the federal-provincial constitutional conference, said it would be "highly improper" for him to comment.

Receiver Robert Young said Canada Kelp went into receivership Aug. 25 and "I don't even have an idea of how many creditors there are, they haven't stopped calling yet."

Dillingham Corp. said it had received less than $500,000 and total expenditure on the kelp project exceeded $4 million.

McKenzie Barge and Derrick, which was building a $1.3 million kelp harvesting vessel, said it is not sure of its position. The vessel is about two-thirds completed.

Nine Million-Ton Coal Market Seen

A potential coal market of nine million tons a year for 35 years to fire thermal electric plants in the U.S. Pacific Northwest is being forecast in support of a new railway in the East Kootenay region.

This and other arguments in favor of an application by Kootenay and Elk Railway Co. are to be discussed at an informal meeting with other railways and the Canadian Transport Commission railway committee in Ottawa Thursday.

Counsel for K and E, Jack Alley, of Vancouver, said here Tuesday the thermal contracts could be a market for waste and byproduct coal produced by Crows Nest Industries Ltd. and other mining companies planning export of metallurgical coal to Japan.

The American contracts could thus help pay for the proposed rail link's equipment and rolling stock, which have not been included in a $20 million line construction estimate.

COST FACTORS

Alley said there had been preoccupation lately with the cost factors of transporting coal from B.C. by means of a U.S. railway to the western seaboard for bulk loading at Roberts Bank terminal.

"People assume that if we don't build the Kootenay and Elk the coal will be sold (to Japan) and go via Canadian Pacific Railway. The odds are the other way — that if there is no Kootenay and Elk line the coal will not be sold and there will be no benefit to Canada and no thermal sales," Alley said.

It is the prospect of a railway competing with the CPR that makes CNI coal sales to Japan attractive, because otherwise the CPR would have too much control over the scheme, Alley pointed out.

tions that his men must fire only in self-defence but should resist any advance by the Jordanian army.

The guerrillas' central committee ordered the unification of all units after King Hussein appointed army officers to replace civilian members of his cabinet.

Guerrillas under Arafat's command took up battle positions around the city, ignoring broadcast government appeals that they turn in their weapons.

REVOKE CEASEFIRE PACT

Arafat attacked the formation of the new government, saying that by imposing martial law the authorities have revoked the ceasefire agreements with the guerrillas.

Arafat's appointment as guerrilla supreme commander puts him in theoretical command of an estimated 50,000 Palestinians and 12,000 Iraqi troops stationed in Jordan.

The decision to unify guerrilla forces was made by the central committee of the guerrilla movement — which rules more than a dozen commando groups — during an emergency session this morning.

At the session, the committee also lifted the suspension of the radical Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine, whose membership was suspended Saturday for defying committee decisions about the passengers and planes it hijacked to Jordan last week.

Hussein's appointment of a military government was officially described as a temporary move designed to obtain enforcement of the latest ceasefire agreements between the government and the guerrillas.

DISTRUST MOTIVES

But the guerrillas clearly distrust the motives which prompted the king to call in the army and impose martial law for the first time since the 1967 six-day war against Israel. Observers believed there was little prospect of the new government and the guerrillas coming together amicably to enforce the agreements.

on the newly-created Municipal Finance Authority."

Curtis pointed out that the Finance Authority's offices are in Victoria, and UBCM would be better served if the two offices were together. He said he was against such a move earlier, but now feels it essential.

Curtis also urged delegates at the opening meeting to criticize the provincial government more when criticism is warranted.

Areas in which an enlarged UBCM operation could serve municipalities include labor relations, municipal research, intermunicipal communication, a library of court cases, and public relations.

Curtis suggested that the "annual pilgrimage" of the UBCM to meet with the provincial cabinet and express its views needs to be changed to more "person-to-person communication."

Also, in his report as outgoing president, Curtis listed rising welfare costs, tax burden on people of fixed income and pollution as three of the most pressing problems facing municipalities.

its cultural characteristics, other provinces also had specific demands. Between now and February, he said, his government will hold "talks, meetings, discussions and consultations," with other Canadian governments at the official level.

He stood ready to discuss a possible amending formula, but he said he would oppose resurrection of the Fulton-Favreau version. Federal officials said that the "enormous background" from that formula will be useful in preparing proposals for a new one.

Premier Louis Robichaud of New Brunswick, predicting that a new constitution can be developed in three to five years, said "I can't say anything to give high priority to an amending formula rather than trying to rewrite a new constitution first.

"I don't think there's any hope at all of first ministers agreeing on a draft constitution for the next year or two," he said.

Premier G. I. Smith of Nova Scotia said: "The difficulties of our task shouldn't be under estimated, but I think we are making progress."

He was particularly pleased that it had been decided to include the question of regional economic disparity in a new constitution. The first ministers decided that the preamble to a new constitution should contain the objective of reducing such disparities. In addition, the constitution itself would refer to the "moral obligations" of government to take appropriate action against disparities.

In an effort to speed the constitutional review process, it was suggested that individual governments could meet to discuss specific constitutional matters, with any agreed-upon issues coming before a full federal-provincial conference for approval.

But Robarts said there is nothing unusual about this. "I have never hesitated to talk to other premiers or prime ministers whenever I thought it would be beneficial."

Long Appointed To Finance Authority

Times Staff

PENTICTON — A Victoria man has been appointed secretary-treasurer of the province's municipal finance authority.

Bill Long, executive director of the Capital Regional District Board, was chosen for the job from a nufber of applicants, it was announced here Tuesday.

The announcement was made to directors of the regional board by hand-delivered letter, under the signature of board chairman Hugh Curtis.

Formal approval of Long's appointment was given by a vote of the finance authority, following recommendation of Long's name by trustees of the authority, attending the annual convention of B.C. municipalities.

The finance authority was created earlier this year by an act of the B.C. legislature. It is designed to aid the financing of municipal projects by pooling the credit of most of the province's municipalities.

In his announcement, Curtis said a new executive director for the Capital Regional District Board will be sought at an early date. Curtis is also president of the Union of B.C. Municipalities.

Long will remain in Victoria with the finance authority head office.

The finance authority has yet to borrow any money for its member municipalities. The appointment of a secretary-treasurer is considered to indicate that operations can now begin.

Municipalities Hit For Spread In Service Costs

Times Staff

PENTICTON — Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell criticized British Columbia's municipalities today for allowing disparities in the cost of providing municipal service.

Speaking to delegates at the opening session of the annual convention of the Union of B.C. Municipalities, Campbell said it is "completely illogical" for cities and towns to continue doing "the same thing in different ways" when it leads to added costs and higher taxes.

In his prepared speech, Campbell noted that many businesses such as banks and trust companies have adopted similar methods of doing business without "any loss of identity."

PER CAPITA

A report on municipal administration costs produced by Campbell's department shows the per capita cost of municipal services in Victoria in 1969 was $14.70 compared with Oak Bay's $9.35, Esquimalt's $5.94, Saanich's $8.09, Central Saanich's $15.62, North Saanich's $20.81 and Sidney's $12.96. Vancouver's figure was $8.29.

In his speech scheduled for delivery at 2 p.m. today, Campbell was not expected to hold any hope for delegates expecting an increase in financial help from the province this year.

The UBCM president, Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis, earlier in the day called the current welfare cost sharing formula "unjust and very troubling." The municipalities now pick up 20 per cent of the welfare tab and want this reduced to 10 per cent.

Lack of Psychologist Blamed on City Error

Saanich acting mayor, Ald. Alan Newberry, said today an administrative mistake by Victoria city has left the region without the services of a psychologist for school children.

He said the city neglected to apply for a federal grant prior to a deadline. A psychologist was hired with the approval of the city but was released because the grant money did not come through, he said.

Assistant city manager Bill Hooson said he has no comment to make.

Newberry said the city administers the business affairs of the Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health.

The city's mistake, he said, apparently was the belief the health board would soon come under the Capital Regional District and the the psychologist's salary would come from that source.

School districts were advised by the health board in May to start lining up children for visits from the psychologist when school resumed this month, he said.

But when school opened, teachers were told the psychologist's services were terminated Aug. 31 because there was no grant.

"The salary of the psychologist would have come from federal funds so it wouldn't have cost this community a cent," he said.

Crux Hearing Starts

VANCOUVER (CP)) — A. G. Duncan Crux, former head of the Commonwealth group of companies, appeared in provincial court Tuesday at the start of a preliminary hearing into further charges of theft.

Crux is charged with defrauding shareholders of Commonwealth Leasing and Commonwealth Trust Co.

The crown is not yet proceeding against Crux on a charge of fraudulently converting $79,569 belonging to Commonwealth Leasing Co. Ltd.

Also appearing at the preliminary hearing was Crux's former business associate Dr. Cornelius Polvliet. Polvliet is charged with fraudulently converting $79,659 belonging to Commonwealth Leasing Co. Ltd., defrauding shareholders of Commonwealth Leasing and Commonwealth Trust Co.

Nixon 'Happy' Hijacking Thwarted: Brinks Guard

CHICAGO (AP) — A Brink's courier who wounded a would-be hijacker aboard an airliner told President Nixon, "I was only doing my job."

The president thanked Robert E. DeNisco, 34, of Brooklyn, N.Y., by telephone Tuesday night. Nixon asked him to give a first-hand account of the episode on the TWA Boeing 707 to federal authorities assembling a force of armed guards to counter airline hijackings.

★ ★ ★

The incident occurred on a San Francisco airport runway. DeNisco later flew to Chicago where the White House reached him by telephone. DeNisco said Nixon "was very enthusiastic and happy it turned out the way it did."

DeNisco, firing over the heads of other passengers, shot the hijacker, Donald Irwin, 38, of Reseda, Calif., in the abdomen with a .38-calibre pistol.

★ ★ ★

Earlier, Irwin had handed a stewardess a note saying he had a gun and wanted to go to North Korea. Federal authorities said the man, a former mental patient, would be charged with air piracy. He was in critical condition in hospital.

DeNisco, a veteran of army service in Vietnam, said that before boarding he had identified himself as a Brink's courier escorting negotiable securities and the airliner crew knew he was armed.

Black Militant Killed

NEW ORLEANS (AP) —Police said one black militant was killed and three were wounded by shotgun blasts from a riot squad Tuesday night when they tried to firebomb a grocery store owned by a member of their race.

Poice identified the dead youth as Kenneth Borden, 21, of New Oreans. The three wounded were in hospital for surgery.

A heavily-armed police tactical unit was moved to the area —near a big Negro housing project—after the shooting but was pulled out early today.

The shooting occurred at the small corner grocery where two injured Negro men had found sanctuary Monday night in their flight from Black Panther headquarters, where they had been accused of being police undercover agents.

Police stormed the headquarters Tuesday morning. Seven persons were wounded in shooting before the occupants of the white-frame house were flushed out with tear gas.

The 16 arrested at the headquarters were booked on charges of attempted murder. A 14-year-old boy among them was referred to juvenile court. The rest were held under $100,000 bond each.

TITO TALKS SET

WASHINGTON (Reuters) — President Nixon will visit Yugoslavia for talks with President Tito during his nine-day trip to Europe beginning Sept. 27, the White House announced today.

It will be Nixon's second visit to a Communist country, following his stop in Romania on the way home from his round-the-world trip last year.

Other countries Nixon plans to visit on this month's trip are Italy, Spain and Britain, as announced by the White House Tuesday.

White House press secretary Ronald Ziegler said Nixon will not visit France.

Ziegler said Nixon was pleased with the development of good political, economic and cultural relations between the U.S. and Yugoslavia and hoped his visit would further improve these relations.

Nixon's European trip stresses U.S. naval power in the Mediterranean and his efforts to resolve the deepening Middle East crisis.

He will review manoeuvres of the U.S. 6th Fleet in the Mediterranean and will also confer at some point on his trip with David K. E. Bruce, chief U.S. negotiator at the Paris peace talks.

Nixon is widely expected to visit the United Nations in New York during October and there appears a strong possibility that he will hold a summit meeting there with Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin.

Gromyko Plans Visit To London

LONDON (UPI) — Britain has invited Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko for wide-ranging policy talks. Gromyko has accepted and is expected in London "later this year," the foreign office has announced.

It will be the Russian diplomat's first negotiating visit to Britain since 1965, signifying, in the view of diplomatic quarters, growing Soviet interest in the extension of an East-West dialogue.

The foreign office spokesman said discussions on detailed arrangements are proceeding currently between the two governments.

Diplomatic sources said the visit is likely to take place next month when Gromyko plans to return to Moscow from the United Nations General Assembly.

Battles in Affluence

THE EFFECT OF THE STRIKE of more than one-third of a million General Motors employees—27,000 of them in Canada — will be felt far beyond the immediate automobile industry. The many thousands of workers engaged in supplying instruments, parts and accessories to the GM plants and still other thousands engaged in basic material industries, will be affected before many days have passed.

The giant business complex and the giant United Auto Workers union which is an integral part of the industry together constitute a significant part of the productive capacity of the United States and of Canada. What happens, both as a result of the strike-accompanied bargaining and the attrition of what may be a lengthy walkout, will affect the economies of both countries. The settlement, in regard to pensions, cost-of-living increments and wages, will set guidelines of a sort for labor all over the continent; the attrition will be felt in tighter family budgets, complementary layoffs, reduced retail sales and other aspects of non-employment.

The wage-parity situation which exists between the United States and Canadian sections of the UAW imposes a sense of helplessness on Canada. The tail will not wag the dog, and Canadian government guidelines for wage increases will receive no attention in the heavy bargaining between GM and the UAW. Yet the gains won for GM employees in Canada will inevitably affect Canadian wage levels and the demands of other Canadian workers.

The size of the bargaining organizations in the present case serves to emphasize the colossal waste and loss that accompany strike action. Smaller localized strikes can be disastrous to those involved, but when the upheaval is on a continental basis, the cost to national economies and to the hundreds of thousands of individuals and families affected provides a continuing criticism of the shortcomings of our labor negotiating system. The cost to GM will be $30 million a day in lost production; to the strikers, $42.5 million a week in lost wages.

Our lack of advancement in this sector of our social organization is a heavy drain on the benefits of our higher technological skill. We are prosperous enough usually to survive the heavy losses of periodic industrial stalemates. But such a hit-or-miss system is hardly in keeping with other 20th century gains. In an age of space travel, telestar communication and other modern marvels, wars of mutual attrition between management and labor have a flavor of the ox-cart era. Still less is there room for such situations as that in British Columbia today, where a struggle for recognition of one pulp and paper union over two others so far has idled 4,000 workers in that industry and another 5,000 men in the woods.

In the background of industrial disputes is the ironic fact that the greater and more widespread the wage gains, the larger the toll that will be imposed by the correspondingly accelerated cost-of-living rate. Both sides have a long way to go in conquering this common enemy. Is internecine warfare an inescapable part of the campaign? The real losers, the vast body of the nation, will answer no.

The United Nations At 25

AS THE ROW OF FLAGS OUTside the impressive United Nations building has grown longer the organization's horizons have shortened. And when the 25th anniversary meeting of the General Assembly opened yesterday, the 126 member nations had no thought that the high ideals expressed 25 years ago in San Francisco at the inaugural meeting have been realized. Rather, Secretary General U Thant's succinct utterance in 1969 haunts the assembly chamber: "The UN has 10 years to become effective or disappear."

It could be said that the UN has become an international organization to promote national policy. And as former Canadian Prime Minister Lester Pearson says, "nor will we be able to do anything about this until there is a stronger sense of international commitment and responsibility than there is at present among the members, especially the most powerful." Few diplomats knew the internal workings of the UN better than Mr. Pearson, and the organization's specific failures reinforce his general statement.

The absence of Red China should be counted among the major faults. While most of the responsibility for this deliberate oversight rests with the United States, the original arrangement that gave Chiang Kai-Shek's representatives major power status in the Security Council makes the UN less credible in the world community. Nor has the UN's power for political intervention been served by the use of the veto in the Security Council. Without agreement among the great powers, the Security Council is powerless.

Among all the major postwar crises, the UN has been effective in only a few, such as the Congo and Cyprus disputes. Cuba and the Middle East were debated, but Vietnam and the Biafran conflict have been effectively kept out of the UN. A number of the African and Asian nations are becoming cynical about the organization as the richer nations, despite the UN sanctions resolution, continue to trade with South Africa and Rhodesia. Moreover, in recent years the wealthier nations have shied away from using the UN as a catalyst for economic development.

In the economic, social and health fields the UN has had some outstanding successes. But if the UN's political role has been less than successful, the member nations can only blame themselves, not the organization. Besides the medical, economic and technical accomplishments that have eliminated disease epidemics, aided industrial development, and upgraded agricultural production in many parts of the world, numerous new fields where the UN might excel are opening up. There are still great tasks to be done in the economic field, assisting new nations into the technological and industrial world. Of paramount importance in this area is birth control.

Preventing the further deterioration of the planet's environment and bringing international law to bear on some of the world's current pollution problems is another area for involvement, as is outer space. But the generalities are easier to list than the specific problems which the UN might affect. In the next 25 years there will be profound changes in mankind's way of life; without profound changes in the United Nations the world may find itself bereft of any organization to cope with its problems.

Little Progress on the Polluted Lakes

Greer

THE Great Lakes Environmental Conference of eight American states and three Canadian provinces here was a two-day affair, the first of which was a closed "technical session" at which officials of the governments involved were supposed to come up with recommendations for consideration by their governors and premiers the following day. A reporter wandering through the Ohio seats after the doors were flung open to the press came across a pile of documents with the word "discard" scrawled on their covers. The document on the top of the pile was a compilation of background papers sent to all delegations in advance by the host of the conference, the Ontario government.

To a considerable extent, that is what happened to most of Ontario's ideas for cleaning up pollution in the Great Lakes.

A major theme of the Ontario background papers, for example, was the need to "rationalize" the plethora of government agencies responsible in some respect for water quality in the Great Lakes. There are 11 governments (eight states, one province, and both federal governments) directly involved and two others — Quebec and Manitoba — who are watershed recipients and therefore concerned with the anti-pollution standards set in the Great Lakes Basin. Most of these governments have spread administrative responsibility amongst several departments or ministries. There are 14 international agencies, ranging from the International Joint Commission to the Great Lakes Historical Society. The result is total fragmentation, uncoordinated effort and a lack of communication on the policy-making level.

Through the Morass

One Ontario idea for cutting through this morass was the conference itself — a heads-of-government meeting which hopefully would become a periodic affair for policy co-ordination. In this, it has been moderately successful.

But two other Ontario solutions simply struck out. One, that each government establish within its bureaucracy a single agency responsible for environmental control programs (as Ontario, Wisconsin and Minnesota have done) survived the technical session of the conference but was shot down by the non-conforming governors the next day.

The second and probably most important Ontario proposal received more bizzarre treatment. This was very guardedly worded in the background papers but its object was to find some mechanism for co-ordinating existing programs of pollution control, both in respect of achieving uniform standards of air and water quality and in respect of uniform enforcement of them — something that the International Joint Commission, not having the powers of enforcement, has failed notably to do. The Ontario background papers clearly implied, without saying so, a new agreement outside the IJC either informally or formally arrived at by the Great Lakes states, thus raising the old bugbear about the authority of sub-federal governments to negotiate treaties.

U.S. Rejection

The American officials, who want U.S. federal financial help for anti-pollution programs above all else, would have none of it and proceeded to turn the idea upside down: what was needed, the technical session recommended, was that the IJC should have power of enforcement and the states and province concerned should delegate this power to it.

Nothing daunted, Ontario's Minister of Energy and Resources Management, George Kerr, declared himself pleasantly surprised: what counted, after all, was uniform standards and enforcement throughout the Great Lakes basin; the machinery was relatively unimportant. But Mr. Kerr failed to reckon with the governors or even with his own boss, Premier Robarts. There would be no surrendering of sovereignty, these worthies proclaimed, and the proposal that the IJC be empowered to "order uniform enforcement of standards" was quickly changed to one of "recommend and promote". A subdued Mr. Kerr confessed that he had been, perhaps, "constitutionally naive."

Ironically, however, what emerges from the conference, assuming its recommendations are acceptable to the two federal governments, is a much stronger and more effective International Joint Commission. The governments bordering the Great Lakes want the Commission to be much more activist and energetic, acting as a clearing house for the expeditious exchange of information on environmental programs, as a forum to promote uniformity of standards and enforcement, and — a most surprising concession by the U.S. states — as a freewheeling investigator with power to carry out surveillance and report publicly on the effectiveness of each government's anti-pollution program. The IJC now has power to investigate only if given a specific reference by the two federal governments.

Perhaps the most that can be said of all this, as one Canadian government observer commented to reporters, is that it is fine as far as it goes, but it does not go nearly far enough. The hard fact is that the IJC is a hopelessly inadequate agency for controlling pollution in the Great Lakes because it is administering, in the Boundary Waters Treaty of 1909, a hopelessly obsolete agreement as far as pollution is concerned.

What is required, as the Canadian government has recognized and is now seeking from the U.S., is a commitment by both countries to restore and maintain highly sophisticated standards of water quality, with provision for continuing surveillance and enforcement.

It will not come easily because it requires the U.S. to recognize Canada as an equal user of the Lakes for industrial and community development, and this is something which the U.S., with its get-there-fustest-with-the-mostest mentality, finds very hard if not impossible to do. The prospect, after all, that the U.S. will have to halt or curtail development on its side of Lake Erie in order to permit development on the Canadian shore is not an easy one to accept. It is a moot point whether the conference here has made it any easier.

FROM NEW YORK

By C. L. SULZBERGER

Guerrilla War Has Taken to the Skies

Sulzberger

THROUGHOUT its history the United States has had intermittent trouble with Arab pirates and kidnappers. The first overseas conflict was that with Tripoli (1801-1805). The Bey, along with other Barbary Coast chieftains, had been raiding merchant ships that refused to pay tribute. The resulting war featured the Derna expedition, a long-range commando raid, and the exploits of Stephen Decatur.

One century later Ion Perdicaris, a prosperous American, was kidnapped in northern Morocco by a local thug named Rassouli. Rassouli hoped his action would embarrass the Moroccan sultan's relations with Washington.

The Tripoli war and a subsequent clash between the United States and Algiers were wound up by compromise settlements. The Perdicaris incident was decided by Teddy Roosevelt's policy of waving the big stick.

Teddy's "Big Stick"

His Secretary of State, John Hay, instructed the U.S. Consul General in Tangiers: "We want either Perdicaris alive or Rassouli dead." He got Perdicaris alive and, incidentally, Roosevelt used the slogan in his successful campaign to stay in the White House.

Today's drama, while in some respects similar to these precedents, differ strikingly in methodology and degree. It directly involves other nations. It concerns air piracy rather than sea piracy. The number of American and foreign innocents held under threat is large.

Its philosophical genesis lies in the Arab-Israeli war and the noisome slum villages in which Palestinian refugees have festered for a generation. It is dramatized by the jet age's implicit dangers and television's instant facilities which favor revolutionists by stressing tension and emotion.

The gunboat diplomacy of Thomas Jefferson and the big stick diplomacy of Teddy Roosevelt have been outmoded by nuclear weapons. Today's byword is that one must not use a sledge hammer to smash gnats. No substitute has yet been found and as a result the gnats feel free to sting.

This is an era when armed handfuls can torment entire societies; not does such action always require exceptional derring-do. The Israelis sniff at the Arab guerrillas now tying great nations into knots, saying that when captured they "sing like canaries."

The present air piracies transcend others and are political rather than personal acts. Many aircraft have been diverted by individuals seeking safe havens—to or from Communist lands. But this time guerrilla warfare has taken to the skies.

The immediate issue is not simply whether air piracy can successfully be outlawed as was sea piracy; whether planes can be guaranteed safe arrival at chosen destinations by security measures aboard and at airports. The immediate issue is whether lives can be saved without yielding principles and without destroying hope of Middle East peace.

It is glaringly obvious that if nations yield to skyjackers the crime rate will increase and the ransom price will rise. The appetite of those who would hold innocents in pawn for any cause must only grow in feeding.

Moreover, concessions are bound to encourage all forces opposing a Palestine settlement. The new hawks fluttering in the Middle East are a left-wing faction of the Arab guerrillas, incited by jingo China.

For little money and less effort Peking is securing major dividends, to the embarrassment of Washington and Moscow. It espouses the skyjackers; it send arms to south Yemen (which Chou En-lai will soon visit, as suitably extremist) and Syria (which refuses to envision peace with Israel); it supports guerrilla wars in Muscatman and Palestine.

Peking has also clearly gained a key voice in the largest and hitherto relatively moderate guerrilla group, Al Fatah, which warns that it will deal with pro-peace Arabs as "traitors," and publicizes this statement: "The Chinese government and people firmly denounce the political fraud jointly concocted by the so-called 'superpowers' for a so-called peaceful settlement of the Middle East question."

Those now opposed by the minority faction of Arab Palestinian guerrillas include the United States, Soviet Russia, Nasser, King Hussein and controlling forces in Israel. The minority faction's avowed goal is war, not peace, and its strategy (like Rassouli's) hopes ultimately to poison relationships between Washington and established Arab regimes.

Compassion and sentiment dictate caution against recourse to the discarded gunboats of Jefferson and cudgels of Roosevelt. But if the gnats are allowed to pester the sledge unhampered, more disasters will come.

Spineless

Now that the postal strike is over, once again the federal cabinet has shown to the people of Canada that they are a bunch of spineless politicians bending over backwards to the commands of the unions. A 6 per cent wage guideline was set out but not one strike has been settled with that 6 per cent in mind. The only thing that these jelly fish politicians are capable of is feathering their own nests; such as granting themselves a $3780 a year pension after sitting around Ottawa for a period of six years. I don't see any stipulation that they have to wait till they reach the age of 60 to get it, like they are making the services pensioners wait till they get to 60 before they get their lousy 2 per cent they have so graciously granted us. — F. M. Pennie, 5366 Alderley.

"Cork" the Gorge

Some time ago you published an article by Roger Stonebanks quoting the opinion of Mr. Frank Neate, design engineer for Saanich Municipality, which described a possible dam across Selkirk Water, north of the railway trestle, to prevent polluted water from backing up all the way into the upper Gorge and Portage Inlet.

You previously publicized my views on this subject. I would appreciate it if you accept further comment.

Frank Neate's plan would serve the purpose, but the same purpose, as dealt with in our previous submission to the Times, could be achieved at a fraction of the cost by simply putting a concrete "cork," into the "bottleneck," of the Gorge itself.

Mr. Neate's plan would completely, permanently obliterate the present scenic attraction of the falls at the restricted channel at the Gorge.

Our plan would plug the Gorge, at the point where a simple, but perfect base and anchor walls exist for a dam, and still allow an overflow of water to maintain the falls, in one continuous direction.

At a minimum of cost, the dam at the Gorge could be raised in height to increase the amount of fall.—John Bullivant, Vancouver, B.C.

Looking Back

From the Times of September 16, 1910.

Cable advices announcing the launch of the new CPR steamer Princess Mary from the yards of Bow, McLauchin and Company, Paisley, are daily expected, it having been announced that the vessel will take to the water this week. The new steamer will replace the City of Nanaimo on the Victoria, Nanaimo and Comox run and it will furnish a service, probably twice a week between Nanaimo and Vancouver.

More 'Canadian Content' Needed in Schools Too

By ARNOLD EDINBOROUGH
The Financial Post

Ever since Prime Minister Trudeau took office more than two years ago, there has been more talk about Canadian sovereignty and Canadian independence than for some years.

But will we survive the next 20 years as a truly sovereign country?

Donald Creighton, our most distinguished historian, has grave doubts. And Robin Mathews, a young professor of English at Carleton University, Ottawa, has doubts, too.

I heard Mathews recently at the third annual conference of the Canadian Council of Teachers of English.

He spoke passionately about the way in which universities are staffed increasingly by Americans.

He said we might expect that, in the scientific and technical fields, U.S. universities — liberally supported by the parent companies of those branch plants here that give little to higher education — have many more sophisticated research centres, experimental facilities and graduate schools than we have as yet in Canada.

They produce more university teachers than we can.

Yet our standard of living is such that we expect the same percentage of our young to go to university as in the U.S. Result: American professors are imported, through governmental bodies or agencies, to staff those centres we are just beginning to build, largely out of tax money.

But Mathews pointed out that it is not just in the sciences that we have a large influx of American professors, it is in the social sciences, too.

Several of our newer universities have departments of political science and economics, even history, staffed by Americans. That they were never taught about Canadian institutions in say, Montana or Wyoming or Kansas, we can understand. But if they come up here, they can't teach what they don't know. The Canadian component therefore, of our social studies curriculum is very thin indeed in some universities.

In English departments, the situation is worse. We have not only American professors, bearing the torch for Thoreau, Emerson, Whitman and Hawthorne, but a large number of English professors who, while they know a lot about Wordsworth, Milton and Tennyson, know little about Lampman, Carman or even Leacock — and care less.

EDINBOROUGH

In the social sciences, therefore, the Canadian student is likely to have little or no instruction in precisely those things that make this country a different entity from the U.S. and from the countries from which we sprang.

In English, he is taught that there is really no Canadian writing worth talking about. Not because there isn't any, but because the people teaching him either don't know it or, worse, cannot learn it, since they have no point of identification with Canadian life.

One has to live in Canada a great many years (as I know from experience) before the sheer truth of Leacock's little story of going into a bank becomes clear. Yet in that story is embedded the whole 19th-century Canadian character: being fussed by money, distrustful of bankers and endowed with an inferiority complex a mile high.

Again, how can a new arrival know the setting for Robertson Davies' play Overlaid? The sheer grimness of the small Ontario farm, the rigidity of the rural church, the intense desire occasionally to throw it all up and leave — a desire now easily fulfilled but, when it was not so easily fulfilled, the very fabric of the national life, characters and politics.

Said Mathews, truly, this is all overlooked in the great majority of Canadian universities.

In Toronto, the English department might be in Cambridge or Yale for all that it cares about Canadian literature. More then 100 courses in English are available; only one deals with Canadian literature.

The same thing is true in the schools.

There is little reading about Canada. As one delegate to the conference put it with force and venom: "How in hell can you teach a Grade 11 Indian, supposing he ever gets that far, what David Copperfield is all about?"

My own children have spent far more time on Thomas Hardy, Emily Bronte, Charles Dickens and Dylan Thomas than they have on Canadian authors.

The feel and tone of Bronte's moors could much better be realized if they had first read As for Me and My House by Sinclair Ross, which tells of the particular loneliness and spiritual isolation felt by a sensitive person on the Depression prairies.

LEACOCK

After reading Barometer Rising by Hugh MacLennan or Leaven of Malice by Robertson Davies, they would know more about the small town of Casterbridge and Hardy's portrayal of its mayor, than they would just by reading the notes in the back of the book (published in England).

But there is a sort of critical bashfulness that omits Canadian authors from the curriculum because they don't rate with Shakespeare. (If Shakespeare is A, then Leacock is B-minus.)

But schools are not just institutions of literary criticism; they are the places in which our own literary heritage, our own culture, is handed on.

Everyone knows that. But, echoing Bernie Hodgett's shattering report on the teaching of social studies in our public schools, these assembled English teachers were asking, "What culture, what heritage?"

It is all very well for the government to get tough with the Americans in matters of trade. It is all very elevating when the Canadian Radio-Television Commission tells radio and television stations to operate on 60 per cent Canadian content or else lose their licenses. But where is the Canadian content to come from if all through school children are told, either subtly or directly, that there is no valid tradition of writing in this country, that their models all lie outside our territorial borders?

If we are to have a Canadian nation, we have to see to it that the seeds of a vibrant, definite, yet not chauvinistic nationalism are sown in school, nurtured at university and rewarded in the commercial world afterward.

MacLENNAN

Shouldn't we look as much to our human resources and their development as to our natural resources? Aren't ideas more important than oil?

Because if we don't act on ideas, who will care about the oil anyway?

Priests and the Revolution

By MALCOLM W. BROWNE

BUENOS AIRES — The growing association of the priestly cassock with revolutionary violence has become a concern of crisis proportions to both the Roman Catholic Church and the Argentine Government.

Bishops of the church met early in August in secret and later with President Roberto Marcelo Levingston to discuss the situation.

The discussions centred in particular on two Catholic priests in jail on charges of revolutionary activity. They have been linked with the kidnapping last May 29 and subsequent murder of Maj. Gen. Pedro Eugenio Aramburu, a former president.

▣

But in general, the government is concerned that a bloc of leftist Argentine priests and bishops may have become a militant political force in national affairs, including labor strikes, demonstrations and violence.

A high official of the state security police recently told an interviewer that his organization had dealt with Communist guerrillas, and had problems with terrorism involving followers of Maj. Gen. Juan D. Peron, ousted as president in 1955, who are becoming increasingly identified with the Marxists. He said however that "the gravest threat by far facing Argentina today was the militant leftist priesthood."

In fact, the Argentina church — Catholicism is by law the national religion — remains predominantly conservative in leadership.

Antonio Cardinal Caggiano, Primate of Argentina, and many bishops and priests have denounced not only priestly violence but any form of participation by priests in secular political matters.

In recent years, fewer and fewer young men in Argentina have sought ordination as priests, and a greater number of foreign priests, especially Spaniards, have come to Argentina to meet requirements.

With the foreign priests, who now comprise more than a quarter of the national priesthood, have come foreign social ideas.

The prestige of the church with the Argentine people has clearly declined over the years, and many young priests today believe that only radical renovation of the faith can restore its acceptability.

Most of these priests believe that political and social reforms are vital to the nation as well and that priests should be leaders of change.

Three years ago, liberal and leftist Argentine priests, representing a wide range of divergent views, joined to form a loose organization known as Priests Movement for the Third World.

The Third World priests rejected the capitalist system as a form of "institutionalized violence" and began a campaign against the military government and their own conservative bishops. Today, the movement numbers about 400 priests and a few bishops, representing roughly 10 per cent of the Argentine clergy.

Most members follow the pastoral views of the Most Rev. Helder Camara, Archbishop of Recife and Olinda, in Brazil, who favors the "liberating force of moral pressure" rather than violence.

But even this philosophy is much too extreme to suit Argentine church conservatives, who are currently seeking to have the church ban the Third World movement.

▣

Inevitably, here as in other Latin American countries, a small number of Third World priests now advocate violent revolution. Security forces are not certain how many Argentine priests are ready to take arms on behalf of guerrilla groups — but they are worried.

The government is holding the Rev. Alberto Carbone of Buenos Aires and the Rev. Fulgencio Rojas of Cordoba, both suspected of having served guerrilla groups.

The situation has been exacerbated by statements from the Third World priests, mildly condemning the kidnapping and murder of Aramburu while justifying violence as a final alternative.

Water Running Short in U.K.

Britain, a country with one of the wettest climates in Europe, is in danger of running out of water before the end of the century.

In the course of an international seminar on river basins held in London recently, Lord Kennet revealed that the demand for water in England — where, on average, 54 gallons per person are consumed every day — is expected to double within the next 30 years.

UNESCO FEATURES

With a population density greater than that of India, Britain suffers from a serious shortage of agricultural land and, as the demand for water increases, plans to build new storage reservoirs in farming areas meet with increasing public opposition.

Various other alternative storage sources for water are being investigated in Britain. Some work has been done on the underground storage of water in naturally occurring water-bearing rock strata.

Britain has already supplied oil-fired desalination plants based on the multi-stage distillation process, for countries in the Middle East and the Mediterranean regions. For operation in Britain with a lower ambient temperature, however, it is considered that either atomic power must be used to keep fuel costs down or an alternative system to distillation will need to be used.

Just for the Love of It

By ART STOTT

While he was talking Monday evening about the quality of life — which he believes can be enhanced by capable people helping other people who need help — University of Victoria Chancellor Roderick Haig-Brown drew attention to "the vast and largely unexploited field of the true amateur — the man or woman who undertakes serious and important work for the love of it."

A society which has come in large degree to equate the importance of work with the money paid for it, he noted, largely discounts the amateur's potential. Yet, he pointed out, in Europe amateurs in various fields have made significant contributions to the quality of life, helping to give it a fulness and direction.

* * *

My experience with amateurs has been tied mainly to those in sport. It has been long enough to watch the accelerated evolution of professionals in various games to their present social status — a development due, perhaps, as much as anything to the equating of the importance of performance with the money paid for it.

I'm old enough, also, to remember the reports of procedure in British cricket — once a synonym for fair play and all that was good in the sporting spirit — but class-conscious enough to have the "gentlemen", those well-heeled enough to play for fun, enter and leave the playing area by one gate and those who played for money to leave by another. That kind of discrimination is pretty well extinct now. The professional entertainers good enough to draw crowds through the turnstiles have moved through equality to superiority in the scheme of things athletic.

But there are still amateurs. And some of those amateurs are exceedingly good. Their abilities and their experience, their knowledge of particular sports and their capacity to impart it to others, provide, in this limited field, an opportunity to help those who need help in games. This assumes — and the assumption is a belief with me — that there are benefits in proficiency in sport.

It isn't so long ago in this community that we had young men, past the competitive age, who were providing a proficiency for youngsters that earned them places on Canadian Olympic and Empire Games teams. Bruce Humber and the late Harry Mitchell were two, and they weren't alone. They happened to have an abiding interest in track and field and a desire to help youngsters reach the peaks in it. So they gave hours of their time to the job and they produced results. In the process, they were paying back a debt contracted to an older man, professional by definition of the A.A.U. but amateur at heart. And Bruce and Harry improved the quality of life for themselves and for those they coached in the process.

They were not paid in cash. But they collected their rewards. Among them were recognition, a sense of accomplishment, the satisfaction of seeing a protege come through, the glitter of headlines, the commendation of their fellows, the friendships which they made and held, and, on occasion, the conviction that by heading some boys down the cinder track they were steering them away from anti-social activity. That kind of pay you don't measure in dollars.

* * *

The Uvic chancellor was not confining himself to athletics when he spoke of "the vast and largely unexploited field of the true amateur." He saw value in the services of such amateurs in social work, neighborliness and demanding studies, undertaken for the love of it, in various sciences.

What's that got to do with the quality of life? Just this, I think: in addition to giving assisance where it's needed, it helps the helper to push aside the growing sense of unease and discontent which seems to be accompanying our float upwards into leisure and affluence. Members of my generation in comfortable circumstances—and never have more been in that group—come to realize the inadequacy of the accumulation of physical possessions or the belated playboy life. It's an anomalous confession from a person who loves his creature comforts and speedily adapts to infrequent incursions into luxury, at somebody else's expense, but it's valid.

* * *

It isn't enough, though, to try to be a do-gooder for the personal enjoyment, self-aggandizement, of do-gooding. The individual has to be equipped to accomplish some constructive objective. You want to help someone who needs help? Fine. But make sure you're equipped to give help before you start. The result can be negative if you bungle into something you can't handle because all you had to offer were good intentions. The preparation, also, can be a factor in improving the quality of life—or would you rather buy another crock or spend too much leisure in the beer parlor?

MARKET SUMMARIES

Buying Spree on Wall St.

Buying spree attributed chiefly to professional traders sparked the New York stock market to a gain today with the industrial index up 3.76 points at the close. The market suffered a decline Tuesday attributed to the strike at General Motors.

The Toronto market was mixed to fractionally lower all day with industrials winding up down .15. It was the second straight declining session. Weakest sectors were construction and materials, merchandising and real estate.

AT TORONTO, in industrials, Toronto Dominion Bank lost ⅝ to 119⅝, Dome Pete ½ to $60, Falconbridge ¼ to $133¾, Inco ⅛ to $40⅞ and Bell ⅛ to $43⅛.

Home A rose 1½ to $19⅞, Jefferson 1⅛ to $11¼, CPR 1 to $59¾, Trans Canada Pipe Line ¾ to $30⅝ and Occidental Pete ⅝ to $21⅛.

TODAY'S GRAIN PRICES

WINNIPEG (CP) — Prices were easier in most commodities in generally light trading on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange today.

Barley and rye were on a strong undertone as exporter inquiry was in evidence. There was good buying in barley by domestic shippers for eastern feeders and rye attracted expert buying and fractional gains were posted in all futures.

There was some liquidation pressure in flax and prices were down about one cent in all futures.

Vancouver rapeseed was also on an easier pattern with a small amount of buying by domestic crushers. Most activity in the Thunder Bay rapeseed was in the April futures.

Lakehead prices for class two and IGA wheat: No. 1 northern up ¼, No. 2 1¼, Nos. 3 and 4 up 2¼ and all durums up 2¼ cents.

CHICAGO (AP) — Corn and soybeans futures prices moved ahead nearly two cents a bushel on the Chicago Board of Trade and then, for the second straight day, the advances gradually eroded under profit-taking.

Wheat and oats futures, which had generally reflected early strength in corn and soy beans, also weakened at the close.

Soybean oil futures closed on a strong tone but soybean meal was weak.

Large Grain Sales Hinted By Sen. Hayes

JASPER, Alta. (CP) — Prospects theat all the grain in Canada will be disposed of within 12 months are excellent, Senator Harry Hays (L. Alberta) says.

"I understand that at this time next year . . . probably all the grain in Canada will be disposed of and there will be hardly any reserves," he told the Canadian Agriculture Chemicals Association convention.

Senator Hays said his statement was based on "very good authority."

Later, at a news conference, he said the U.S. has lost 10 per cent of its corn crop and there is a fantastic demand for barley, particularly in Japan and Europe.

"In the last 30 days, it has been most encouraging and I have reason to believe there are some large sales coming up in the near future — they've already probably been negotiated."

The senator, former federal agriculture minister, would not elaborate further.

Imp. Tobacco

Imperial Tobacco Co. of Canada Ltd. today switched, becoming Imasco Ltd. to more properly reflect its diversified interests.

In recent years these have included food processing and distributing, wineries and packaging. Imperial is majority shareholder in Growers Wine operations in Victoria and Moose Jaw.

Polymer Corp.

Polymer Corp. Ltd. of Sarnia has formed a joint venture with International Paper Co. of New York to manufacture and market polystyrene food packaging products.

The products will be manufactured by Polymer, which produces synthetic rubber and plastics. International Paper will be responsible for marketing.

The companies said development will begin immediately at a joint facility in Preston, Ont.

Woodwards

Woodward Stores Ltd. reports net profit decreased 24 per cent to $1.5 million in the six-month period ended July 31, from $2 million in the same period last year.

Share dividend was 24 cents compared with 31 cents last year.

Sales declined to $124.26 million from $124.66 million.

Chairman C. N. Woodward attributed the drop in profit to economic conditions in British Columbia and Alberta, where Woodward's operates department stores.

Wabasso

Wabasso Ltd. has called for redemption Oct. 15 at $1 a share of its 2.84 million outstanding class B preferred shares.

The textile company also announced that it has redeemed its 60,000 outstanding Class A shares, par $50, at a total cost of $3 million.

The class A shares were privately held and unlisted, and no advance notice of redemption was required. Funds will come in part through the sale of 213,000 common shares of Fraser Companies Ltd.

Royal Trust

Royal Trust Co. has fixed at $21 a share the price of its previously announced rights offer to purchase additional stock on the basis of one share for each eight shares held.

The decision follows a meeting of directors that agreed shareholders of record Sept. 25 will be entitled to subscribe to the rights, expiring Oct. 28. The additional shares will not qualify for a Nov. 2 dividend.

John Labatt

A 5 per cent increase in net profit based on an 18 per cent rise in sales for the three months ended July 31 is reported by John Labatt Ltd.

Figures for the period were: sales $113 million, up from $96.7 million, and profits $4 million (45 cents a share), up from $3.79 million (43 cents).

Last year as a whole Labatt beer outsold the industry average by 5.4 per cent, or sales went up 11.8 per cent compared with the average of 6.4 per cent, the company said.

Economic Review Shows Sask. Hardest Hit

TORONTO (CP) — The Bank of Nova Scotia says all areas of the country have been hit by the general economic slowdown but Saskatchewan has suffered the most.

The bank says in its August review that in Saskatchewan, "the depressed economic picture reflects the severe difficulties of the wheat industry and, to a lesser extent, the mineral sector."

"However, operation LIFT has achieved a substantial reduction in wheat acreage and will be making available to Saskatchewan farmers some $50 million in federal payments."

The review says housing starts and retail sales in the province were lower than those in the other provinces.

In the Atlantic provinces, business held up well with the number of employed during the first seven months of the year at about the same level as in the corresponding period of 1969.

Manufacturing shipments were running ahead of those of last year and the trend in retail sales has been upward. Some softness, however, was evident as a result of labor troubles in some sectors of the Nova Scotia fishing industry.

REFLECTS SLACK

In Quebec, the low rate of employment reflects a slackness in the industrial sector. Retail sales and housing starts have remained subdued.

The review says the demand for newsprint is down while cost pressures remain strong and competition from United States mills is on the rise.

However, there has been an increase in activity in the aluminum and steel industries, oil refining and mineral production.

Ontario experienced growth in several sectors. Manufacturing shipments have shown a slight increase over 1969 and automobile exports to the United States have increased considerably.

Steel and mineral production has run ahead of last year, and chemical and industrial equipment plants have been busy.

Ontario's economy shows weak spots in farm machinery, aircraft and consumer durable sales. Housebuilding is also on the decline, but non-residential construction has continued strong.

The Prairie provinces present a mixed picture, says the review.

ALBERTA PROSPERED

Employment in Alberta increased through the first part of 1970, but in Manitoba and Saskatchewan the number of people with jobs is down from last year.

Alberta continued to show signs of prosperity. Crude oil production growth is expected to almost match 1969's rate of 13 per cent despite reduced U.S. oil quotas.

Natural gas production is expanding rapidly to meet U.S. shortages. Coal mining for several years a near-dormant industry, has new vitality this year, bolstered by long-term contracts signed with Japan.

Manitoba has had difficulties with wheat, but has shifted its emphasis to livestock production. The province's large food and beverage industry has remained strong, and manufacturing shipments are level with 1969.

British Columbia's growth rate, which mushroomed during the last 10 years, was held in check this year by work stoppages and the general slow pace of business.

Unemployment rates, which stood at over 10 per cent on a seasonally-adjusted basis in June and July, were far above the national average.

Some softening occurred in lumber and plywood products, the province's two major industries. A strong demand was noted in the pulp and paper sector, however.

Financial Crisis Delays Building

NEW YORK (WP) — Wall Street's financial crisis has forced the New York Stock Exchange to put off plans for a new $155 million building here.

An exchange spokesman confirmed Tuesday that erection of the building on landfill in the East River at the foot of Wall Street has been postponed. Earlier this year the exchange shifted $30 million earmarked for the building into the special trust fund which is used to help liquidate failing brokerage firms.

Word of the postponement came after a speech by Donald T. Regan, president of Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner and Smith, Inc., at the National Press Club in Washington. In answer to a question about the future of the exchange, Regan said, "as far as the exchange itself is concerned, it will still be at Broad and Wall Streets."

Later, in reply to the same question, Regan added, "we have already exhausted the building fund" and "we won't have a new exchange building."

Reached by telephone later, Regan explained that he was only talking about the next five years and did not say the plans have been cancelled. The new exchange building was scheduled for completion in 1975.

Alwest Purchases Rights to Houseboat

WINNIPEG (CP) — Alwest Marine, a division of Western Tool and Industries Ltd., has purchased the design and manufacturing rights for the Alcan 370 houseboat formerly produced by the Aluminum Co. of Canada Ltd.

Gordon Clement of Alcan said the company's original aim was to prove to the consumer the advantages of aluminum as a pleasure craft material.

Rodmond Roblin, president of Alwest, said his company will continue to market the boat under the new name Alwest 370.

Cerna Copper Makes Bid For Backing

A half million dollars and a new operating agreement could put southern Vancouver Island's largest copper mine back into operation after a two-year lapse.

A spokesman for president E. C. Dobell, of Cerna Copper Co. Ltd. (formerly Cowichan Copper Co. Ltd.) said efforts have been made and continue to be made to get the backing of a major mining company to restore mining of the Sunro and adjoining claims at Jordan River.

Control of Cerna is in the hands of Crownex International Ltd. and Dison Developments, but the original claims are property of Sunro Mines Ltd., controlled by Cominco.

$ EXCHANGE

Japanese Will Need Minerals

VANCOUVER (CP) — Top executives of the Japanese mining industry gave assurances Tuesday that Japan's demand for Canadian minerals will continue to expand at a rapid rate.

A 13-man Japanese mission arrived in Vancouver after a tour of Canada, during which the visitors conferred with federal and provincial authorities. They also visited mining operations at Sudbury, Elliott Lake, and in British Columbia.

The mission was headed by Toshimi Takabayashi, president of the Japan Mining Industry Association and chairman of the board of Mitsui Mining and Smelting Co.

Yoshiteru Suzuki, managing director of Dowa Mining Co., said there should be an expanding market for Canadian uranium in Japan, reaching 140,000 tons a year by 1985.

Okito Kurata, president of the Japan Coal Association, said he expected that Japanese consumption of imported coking coal would climb from 47 million tons in 1970 to 65 million tons annually within 10 years.

12% INTEREST
Now Offered on Sinking Fund Debentures

The Slegg Acceptance Corporation Ltd., a subsidiary of Slegg Brothers Lumber Ltd., can pay its Debenture holders this attractive rate of interest because the money derived from the sale of these Debentures is used to purchase time payment contracts and to factor accounts arising from retail sales of the parent company. Operating in this manner we can effectively reduce the overhead expense as no costs are incurred in the investment of funds. We are able to pass on the resulting savings to our Debenture holders. Economy of operation always results in higher revenues to the investor.

Interest is paid on our Debentures every quarter, giving the investor an even flow of income throughout the year.

Husband-Wife Team Heads UCT Division

By ELIZABETH FORBES

Husband and wife teams in business and the professions are accepted as a part of living. Not so usual is a husband and wife team installed by a husband and wife team to head important divisions of a large organization such as the United Commercial Travelers of America.

Forbes

I'm thinking of Victoria's Ken and Beverly King who at the end of May, in Portland, Oregon, were installed as Grand Councillors for Oregon, Washington and British Columbia.

The impressive ceremonies were conducted by another Victoria couple, Bill and Bessie Bayliss who, back in 1960-61, held the same positions.

In accepting responsibilities that go with the offices the Kings also accepted the fact that for the year they will be busy visiting UCT councils throughout British Columbia and in the two western states, giving advice, assisting with projects and planning and inaugurating new ones.

"We will travel together," Ken told me, "Beverley will attend our ladies' auxiliary meetings while I meet with the men, In all, there are 23 councils in the territory. We plan to visit the first one, in Penticton, on Saturday."

Honor of being named grand councillors comes only after a time of involvement. In the Kings' case, they've been active in various phases of UCT work for over 15 years.

During that time Ken who in business life is manager of the Douglas Hotel, has been successful, in the local UCT field, in bringing in new members and getting members involved in Victoria Council's "number one" project of aid to retarded children.

Membership in the local council now stands at 765 making it the largest UCT group in Canada. Along with aid to retarded children it has a strong youth program that includes sponsoring a Babe Ruth baseball team, midget lacrosse team, juvenile hockey team and giving a bursary to University of Victoria.

Other activities are safety and the fight against cancer. There is also the "wishing well" project, serviced and maintained by another dedicated member, Bill Chisholm.

The new Grand Councillor did point out that cancer preventation and aid to retarded children are not only of local concern. "They are the two main projects of councils throughout Canada."

UCT ladies auxiliaries assist the men in all their efforts. "In many instances the success of our work depends on the help of our auxiliaries."

At the same time they do have their own officers and their own projects. Here is where Beverley King enters the picture.

In her quiet, well-disciplined voice she enumerates some of the projects the Victoria auxiliary has worked on and completed and others in which they still assist.

"We helped clothe children at the orphanage before it was changed to a family centre. We assist with volunteer help in the kindergarten at George Pearkes Clinic.

"We have presented equipment to the Elford Street home for the retarded and we provide members to score at their special bowling league. Members also provide transportation and drivers for the crippled and retarded."

This year the auxiliary will help "in whatever way needed" at Fernwood House, a hostel for girls in need of temporary residence while looking for work, taking job training or continuing school at the Adult Institute of Studies.

The Kings joined the UCT in 1957 and were named senior councillors here in 1961. Ken has also held the offices of grand sentinel, conductor and junior councillor before reaching his present position of grand councillor. Next year he will be grand past councillor. "I'll then act only in an advisory capacity."

However, as far as both he and his wife are concerned, that's still "in the future." They are off this weekend on the first of an "exciting" series of visits to the 23 councils in the Oregon, Washington and British Columbia area.

Black Anti-War Candidates Lose to Humphrey, Jackson

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Hubert Humphrey and Senator Henry M. Jackson of Washington easily defeated black, anti-war opponents in Democratic primaries for the U.S. Senate, while Senator Joseph D. Tydings of Maryland overcame stiff conservative challenge.

Senator Edward M. Kennedy won without opposition, and Senator John O. Pastore of Rhode Island overwhelmed a token opponent in primaries Tuesday for five Senate seats the Democrats hope to retain.

Primary elections serve the purpose of picking the candidates for each party in the November general election.

Two Democratic governors, Marvin Mandel of Maryland and Frank D. Licht of Rhode Island, were renominated.

Tuesday's voting was the last big round of primaries before the Nov. 3 general election.

In Massachusetts, Boston Mayor Kevin H. White, 44, led state Senate President Maurice A. Donahue, 52, in the bitter, four-way Democratic fight for the nomination for governor against Republican Gov. Francis W. Sargent, 55, who was unopposed.

In Boston, Louise Day Hicks, an outspoken opponent of school-bus transportation to achieve racial integration, won the Democratic nomination for the seat of retiring House Speaker John W. McCormack.

Humphrey, 59, scored a smashing 3-1 margin victory over black studies instructor Earl D. Craig Jr., 31, to capture the Democratic nomination for the Minnesota Senate seat being vacated by Democrat Eugene J. McCarthy.

Humphrey's opponent will be Representative Clark MacGregor, 47, who easily outdistanced a lone opponent.

Jackson, 58, jumped into an early 7-1-margin lead over Carl Maxey, a 46-year-old Spokane lawyer.

Singer Jailed For Indecent Act With Girl

WASHINGTON (AP) — Peter Yarrow of the Peter, Paul and Mary folk singing group was sentenced Tuesday to three months in jail after pleading guilty in March for taking indecent liberties with a 14-year-old girl in a Washington hotel room.

Chief Judge Edward M. Curran of the U.S. district court sentenced Yarrow to jail here after hearing a plea for mercy from attorney Edward Bennett Williams.

Yarrow, 32, was given a one-to-three-year jail term, but the judge suspended all but three months of it, after which the singer will be placed on probation.

Williams told the court that Yarrow does not plan any more concerts or public appearances but instead, with his wife, will devote his activities to social improvement projects.

New Health Care Plan for B.C. Seen

PENTICTON (CP)—Doctors may be paid salaries within the next few years, delegates to the 17th annual meeting of the Associated Boards of Health of British Columbia were told Tuesday.

Dr. George Szasz, director of the office of inter-professional education at the University of British Columbia, also predicted changes in the provincial health care system that would see fewer doctors and an increase in other professional personnel, more home care and regional health care commissions.

"The writing is on the wall," Dr. Szasz said. Doctors first would be paid a salary while working in hospitals, laboratories or while specializing, and within four or five years they would be on "a very good" salary, he said.

Through financing, he said, the government is gaining more and more central control over health care in the province, but health care "is not a business system and cannot be run as such."

Dr. Szasz predicted a new health care system with central and regional branches. The central power, he suggested, would have four branches—legal, research and consultative, service and rental.

The legal branch would make it necessary for every community to have basic services while the service branch policed such things as pollution, environment and communicable diseases.

The research and consultative branch, he said, would devise the most efficient ways of using hospitals and personnel.

The fourth branch would rent hospitals and other expensive services to communities.

He visualized five or six regional health care commissions. Each would have the power to tax and enter into contracts. Members would be elected.

Hospitals would gradually become intensive care units and there would be more clinics and laboratories.

Public health nurses would provide greatly expanded services, under the new system. He predicted a 24-hour nurse service in each community as a "front line of defence."

Dr. Szasz visualized the contracting out of health services for smaller communities, with teams of doctors and nurses submitting bids.

One of the results of the changes forseen by Dr. Szasz is communities getting the type of service they want.

JOBS HELP HEALTH NEEDS

PENTICTON (CP) — Industrial development, not improved health services, is needed if the health standards of Indians in British Columbia are to be brought up to the level enjoyed by the rest of the province's population, George McKnight, a Port Alberni alderman, told the 17th annual meeting Tuesday of the Associated Boards of Health of B.C.

He said numerous studies and recommendations by experts in public health had "generally speaking, failed to solve the problem."

"There is well established and thoroughly documented evidence that the health standards of the native Indian people of B.C. are far and away below that of the balance of the population.

"It can be noted that where Indians enjoy city employment at good wages and when their housing and living standards are equal to the general population, their health standards are in general not different from the rest of the population," Ald. McKnight said.

Social welfare handouts and other relief measures were "like putting a band-aid on a cancer."

The heart of the problem, he said, is the economic, social and psychological environment in which Indians, and many non-Indians, find themselves.

Mr. McKnight called for industrial development and an end to the export of raw materials. Manufacturing industries would provide jobs for everyone, Indians included, he said, and thus solve the problem.

American Hunters Fined

KEREMEOS (CP) — Three American hunters were fined a total of $953.32 for crossing the Canada-U.S. border near this southern Okanagan centre without reporting.

Arrested Monday and fined Tuesday were Archie George Webster, 42, and Kewis Vergil Paul, 33, both of Omak, Wash., and Charles Lee Thomas, 32, of Okanogan, Wash.

They were apprehended about one mile into Canada by a mounted patrol of RCMP and provincial game department officials.

They were charged with hunting without a licence and hunting without a licensed guide required by foreigners. They also were charged under the Customs Act, which requires visitors to report to Canadian border posts.

Two were fined $50 on each of the hunting charges. For the customs violations, Webster was fined $295.40, Thomas $322.56 and Paul $335.36. All of their equipment, including pack horses and ammunition, was seized, but will be returned when the customs fines are paid.

Suicide Rate High

VANCOUVER (CP) — The suicide rate in Vancover is twice the Canadian national average, the director of the Vancouver Crisis and Suicide Prevention Centre told a city service club Tuesday. John Jesiman said the city has 19.2 suicides for each 100,000 population, while the national average is 9.2.

Firemen Absolved

KELOWNA (CP) — An investigation by the Vancouver fire marshal has absolved the Kelowna fire brigade of any fault in a blaze which destroyed the pre-fabricated building housing Okanagan Regional College Feb. 17. The fire was originally called extinguished by the Kelowna brigade. Later, flames flared up again from inside the walls of the building. Damage totalled about $220,000.

Group Ousted

VANCOUVER (CP) — Nineteen members of a group calling itself the Sept. 8 Frank Rogers Hall Movement were evicted early Tuesday from a federal youth hostel at Jericho armed forces base. Members of the movement said a group of 25 "heavies" led by a former member of Hell's Angels motorcycle gang, ejected them with the approval of two hostel staff members.

Appeal Filed

VANCOUVER (CP) — The attorney-general's department has filed notice of appeal against dismissal of a charge of violating a city anti-noise bylaw, laid against Clay Harrold, leader of the Hare Krishna group. The notice says the trial judge was wrong in ruling that the anti-noise bylaw does not apply to persons engaged in religious practices. The Hare Krishna monks, clad in saffron-colored robes, chant almost daily in the downtown business district.

Ex-Premier Wooed

RED DEER (CP) — A petition asking former Alberta Premier E. C. Manning to enter federal politics in time for the next general election is being circulated in Central Alberta.

Fulton Rollings, Social Credit candidate for Red Deer in the next provincial election, said the petition was started because evidence showed "a growing restlessness and dissatisfaction on the federal scene today."

Complaint Aired

KILLARNEY, Man. (CP) — The federal government is discriminating against more than 65 per cent of the citizens of Canada by not participating in cost-sharing of optometric services, the president of the Canadian Association of Optometrists said here Tuesday.

Israel Won't Yield

CALGARY (CP) — Ephraim Evron, Israeli ambassador to Canada, said Tuesday his country will not give in to demands from Arab guerrillas because that "only whets their appetite for more." To give in would be to put Israel's policies in the hands of blackmailers, he told a service club.

'Gone Too Far'

EDMONTON (CP) — The Canadian Federation of Mayors and Municipalities "may perhaps have gone too far" in asking to be an active participant in constitutional conferences, says Mayor Ivor Dent of Edmonton, president of the association. "It appears the difficulties in solving the dilemmas involved in rationalization of the constitution are great enough without an independent urban voice," he said.

Grain Sales Likely

JASPER, Alta. (CP) — Prospects that all the grain in Canada will be disposed of within the next year are excellent, Senator Harry Hays (L — Alberta) said Tuesday. He told the Canadian Agriculture Chemicals Association his statement was based on "very good authority."

It's In The Bag

WINNIPEG (CP) — Ducks Unlimited (Canada) says hunters can expect another good season because of ideal late-summer waterfowl conditions. Although some late hatches still are flightless, there is adequate water to see them safely on the wing. The conservation organization reports white-fronted geese appeared in central Alberta Aug. 24 and their numbers have been increasing steadily.

Publicity Stunt

CALGARY (CP) — Jan Jurek of Calgary, who wanted publicity so he could get a job with an airline company, Tuesday was sentenced to three months for public mischief because of a bomb scare. Jurek, about 30, called police and said he heard people discussing a bomb on an airplane at Calgary's International Airport. He said he has a commercial pilot's licence and needed a job to raise money to bring relatives from Czechoslovakia.

184-SEAT PUB FILLED IN FLASH

WINNIPEG (CP) — Manitobans in the 18-to-20 age bracket toasted their newly-gained adult status Tuesday with an all-out assault on the pubs.

A new age of majority act, lowering to 18 from 21 the age at which Manitobans can sign contracts, make wills or enter licensed drinking establishments, came into effect at midnight Monday.

The first full day since the lowering of the age was Tuesday, and Winnipeg-area hotel managers estimate that about 90 per cent of their drinking patrons were in the 18-to-20 age group.

"It was unbelievable," said Maryland Hotel assistant manager Ed Watson. "They poured in and they poured out. We were considering building a bookshelf and bicycle stand because many of them came straight from school."

The biggest line-ups occurred at 7:30 p.m., when the beverage rooms reopened after their supper-hour closing. John Wolfe, assistant manager of the Plaza Motor Inn, said his 184-seat room was filled within two minutes of reopening.

"It was the fastest I've seen any beverage room filled."

WEATHER SYNOPSIS

Occasional rain spread across the outer B.C. coast early this morning in advance of a weak Pacific cold front. Other coastal areas were mainly cloudy while the interior of the province had just a few clouds.

Showers will spread across the inner south coast and the central interior this evening in advance of the cold front.

A more active Pacific system will produce steady rain and brisk southeast winds over the outer coast on Thursday. The southern interior was mainly sunny today but will be generaly cloudy Thursday.

The Weather and You

By CARL RIBLET JR.

Some women can forecast rain when they brush their hair. If the brush causes the hair to sort of crackle, it isn't likely to rain. But if the brush leaves hair sort of limp, rain may very well be on the way. The atmosphere is humid.

The American Indians could tell rain by the scalps that hung in their wigwams. In fact, many a medicine man kept a scalp suspended from the lodge pole just for that purpose. He could tell about rain when he tested the limpness or liveliness of the hair of the scalp.

There was another reason for scalp testing. The Indian chiefs knew that their warriors would be more aggressive and irritable in wet weather and thus would fight better. They often chose to fight their enemies when wind and rain helped to cover the attack.

House Hunting Disappearing Art

Apartment Renting Best As Vacancy Signs Abound

By PETER McNELLY

The day of the low-rental family house in Victoria appears to be ending.

At the same time, apartment accommodation here offers a wide choice to the prospective tenant.

House-hunting in Victoria has been a scramble for several years, but recent indications show that the scramble has turned into jam.

Until two or three weeks ago, for example, the city's housing registry had no listings for rental houses. Today it lists only seven.

During the summer months, the registry was able to place only 48 out of 178 applicants. And these people had to settle for apartments because no houses were available.

The registry listed a total of 135 apartments during the summer. Today it lists only six duplexes and nine one-bedroom suites.

In a haphazard way, these figures show that while Victoria has not yet approached the housing crisis Vancouver residents have to cope with — rents are still lower here and some houses are available — chances of renting a house are slim.

The housing registry is an agency of the Community Council of Greater Victoria and is supported by grants from the Victoria Real Estate Board and the department of municipal affairs.

Property owners and sometimes real estate agencies list their rental offerings with the agency. But by no means all rental homes appear on the registry's files.

●

The house-hunter can also find available listings in newspaper classified sections, and it's here that the switch from homes to apartments becomes most apparent.

Today, five and one-half columns of apartments are listed in the classified section. Two years ago this month, only one and one-half columns of apartment listings appeared.

Garth Homer, the Community Council's executive director, said today that one major change in the region's housing market in the last few years is the acceptability of children.

●

When apartment accommodation was relatively scarce two years ago, few apartments would take families with children. Today, because of increased apartment construction and therefore higher vacancy rates in the area, some apartments have reduced rents and allowed children.

Unless a house is old, out of town or very small, it's unlikely to rent for less than $135 a month.

In this morning's classified section, 26 unfurnished houses were listed for rent. Four asked less than $125. One of those was a duplex.

Most of the remainder listed rents from $150 to over $300.

What this means is that a family man with three or four children must expect to shell out a good chunk of his take-home pay for rent.

For the poor the problem is more pressing. Blanshard Court, for example, has a waiting list three years long. Demand is high and the turnover low.

Many poor people, those who cannot live in Blanshard Court, have to live in substandard housing.

●

A city social worker said a recent survey of housing for the poor showed that many live in unsafe, poorly-heated firetraps for which they pay exorbitant rents.

One case brought to light this week revealed that an elderly couple on a combined old-age pension of $222 had to live in a house which a city fire inspector discovered had an unsafe fireplace and oil stove.

The house, at 1817 Quadra, rents for $100 a month. The couple, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Williams, ages 86 and 73, were given the place at a reduced rent if they promised to fix it up.

●

But Victoria welfare director Alex Davidson said the landlord had been notified that it is his responsibility to repair the house. He said the welfare department would help the couple find another place to live if they wanted to move.

Another characteristic of some older homes here, is that they're on land which is no longer zoned for residential use.

This means property taxes are higher, and this can result in higher rents than the quality of the house deserves. Many of these places will be torn down for apartments or commercial development.

In the meantime, they are usually rented to low income people, who, as usual, have to take what they can get.

THE "A" CONCEPT

No Rumble Seat In a New Basic

By Jack Scott

The news that the Ford Motor Company is soon to put into production "a very basic car"—a car as basic, indeed, as the Model "T" or the Model "A"—sent me impetuously hippity-hoppity to Peter Pollen's place to order one.

So the car will have a plywood body? So it will have canvas seats? Who cares? The price will be under $900. That's a price that's right. Besides, as a one-time owner of no less than three Model "A" beauties, I've been dreaming of this day when the auto men would get back to a car that's economical, simple and marvellous fun.

Pollen, the alderman and Ford dealer, is so young, a mere stripling of 42, that there's not even a Model "A", much less a Model "T", in his past. There is one, however, in his future since the lads at his shop are lovingly restoring what appears to be a 1930 two-door sedan, a sight that had me fairly oozing nostalgia. Oh, that was a good one.

Scott

This rather diverted me from my original mission, but it turns out, in any event, that the new Ford basic, "the modern Model 'T' for the masses," is to be marketed only in Australia and Asian nations. Unless I can manage a trip to Brisbane or Hong Kong I'll have to stick to what I've got.

But Peter agreed with me, as a loyal Ford man naturally would, that the "T" and the "A"—always referred to, respectively, as Henry's Tin Lizzie and the Ubiquitous Model "A"—were magnificent automobiles. A. W. Miller, Sports Illustrated's authority on vintage cars, once described the "A" series, which began in 1927 and went until 1931, as "the finest all-round automobile ever built." Anyone who ever owned one will doubtless agree.

What makes a man cling so stubbornly to the memory of a venerable crate that now seems downright comical? Peter's hunch is that it was the incredible rapport that developed between the driver and the machine.

★ ★ ★

"If something went wrong there was a good chance that you could fix it," he said. "If it wouldn't start you could crank it—and the 'A', by the way, had the first removable crank. You operated the car so there was an affinity that could become a kind of love."

That, I think, is exactly it. Looking into the front seat of the "A" that he's restoring, I was engulfed in unbelievably precise recollections of the '31 roadster (with rumble seat) that completely and forever stole my heart.

The spark control lever on the left side of the steering column and the throttle lever to the right had to be adjusted for take-off just exactly so or nothing would happen. The choke, under the dashboard at the far right, so far to the right that you might inadvertently brush the silken knees of your companion, had to be twisted twice and pulled out precisely three and one-eighth inches or it was no go. Absolutely nothing was automatic. Perhaps, as Peter says, that was the delight of it.

★ ★ ★

Surely, I ventured, if the Australian-Asian basic Ford were to be made available here it would be just as much a runaway seller as the '29 and '30 Fords that each went over the million-mark in sales?

Pollen thought not.

"The basic car is coming back as a concept of North American automobile making, but they're not all that basic," he said. "Our own Pinto, Chevrolet's Vegas and American Motors' Gremlin are basic to a point, but they're more properly described as mini-luxury cars. In an affluent society the car-buyer isn't going to go for canvas seats or willingly substitute wool-lined driving gloves for an efficient heater.

"On the other hand there are profound changes taking place in the public acceptance of cars generally. You might say that the seduction, or the honeymoon, the creation of a desire for a status symbol, is pretty much over. Ralph Nader had done a lot to de-glamorize the automobile. The need to combat pollution is another factor.

★ ★ ★

"Then, too, there are so many alternative things that a man can find to spend his money on today — the stock market, a cottage, a boat — that the great, big, sexy automobile is no longer the attraction it was. The manufacturers see and are now meeting a new demand for efficient transportation, for styles that don't change drastically from year to year, for a power-to-weight ratio compatible with high-speed highway conditions and cities that are running out of parking room. That means the return of a basic car, in essence, but one with comfort and advanced technology. We hope it will mean, as well, a car that people will learn to love just as they did the Model 'A'."

At that red hot minute, as it happened, the mini Ford Pinto was being readied for its first public unveiling, but I was too busy mooning over that ancient '30 two-door and certain memories of what went on in rumble seats to wrench myself into the present.

Young Man Rescues Woman

An unidentified young man rescued an elderly woman from a house fire Tuesday, then vanished before she could thank him.

Mrs. Margaret Percy, 59, of 1239 Pandora, was rescued from the upstairs of the smoke-filled house.

The rescuer was the same man who initially warned Mrs. Margaret Winterburn that the house was on fire. He dashed upstairs while fire officials were called.

Oxygen treatment on the front porch of the house and follow-up care at St. Joseph's Hospital left Mrs. Percy in good condtion despite an already existing lung ailment.

Fire officials blamed careless smoking for the blaze, and damage was estimated at $250.

Saanich Bus Runs To Continue

Normal bus service by Vancouver Island Coach Lines to the Saanich Peninsula will continue for at least the time being, acting manager Jack Thomas said today.

The company had applied to the B.C. Public Utilities Commission to end its service to Cordova Bay, West Saanich and Sidney-Deep Cove effective Tuesday claiming losses of more than $100,000 a year.

Later, the company suggested to peninsula municipalities a sharply reduced service. Municipal councils have tabled the proposal for study.

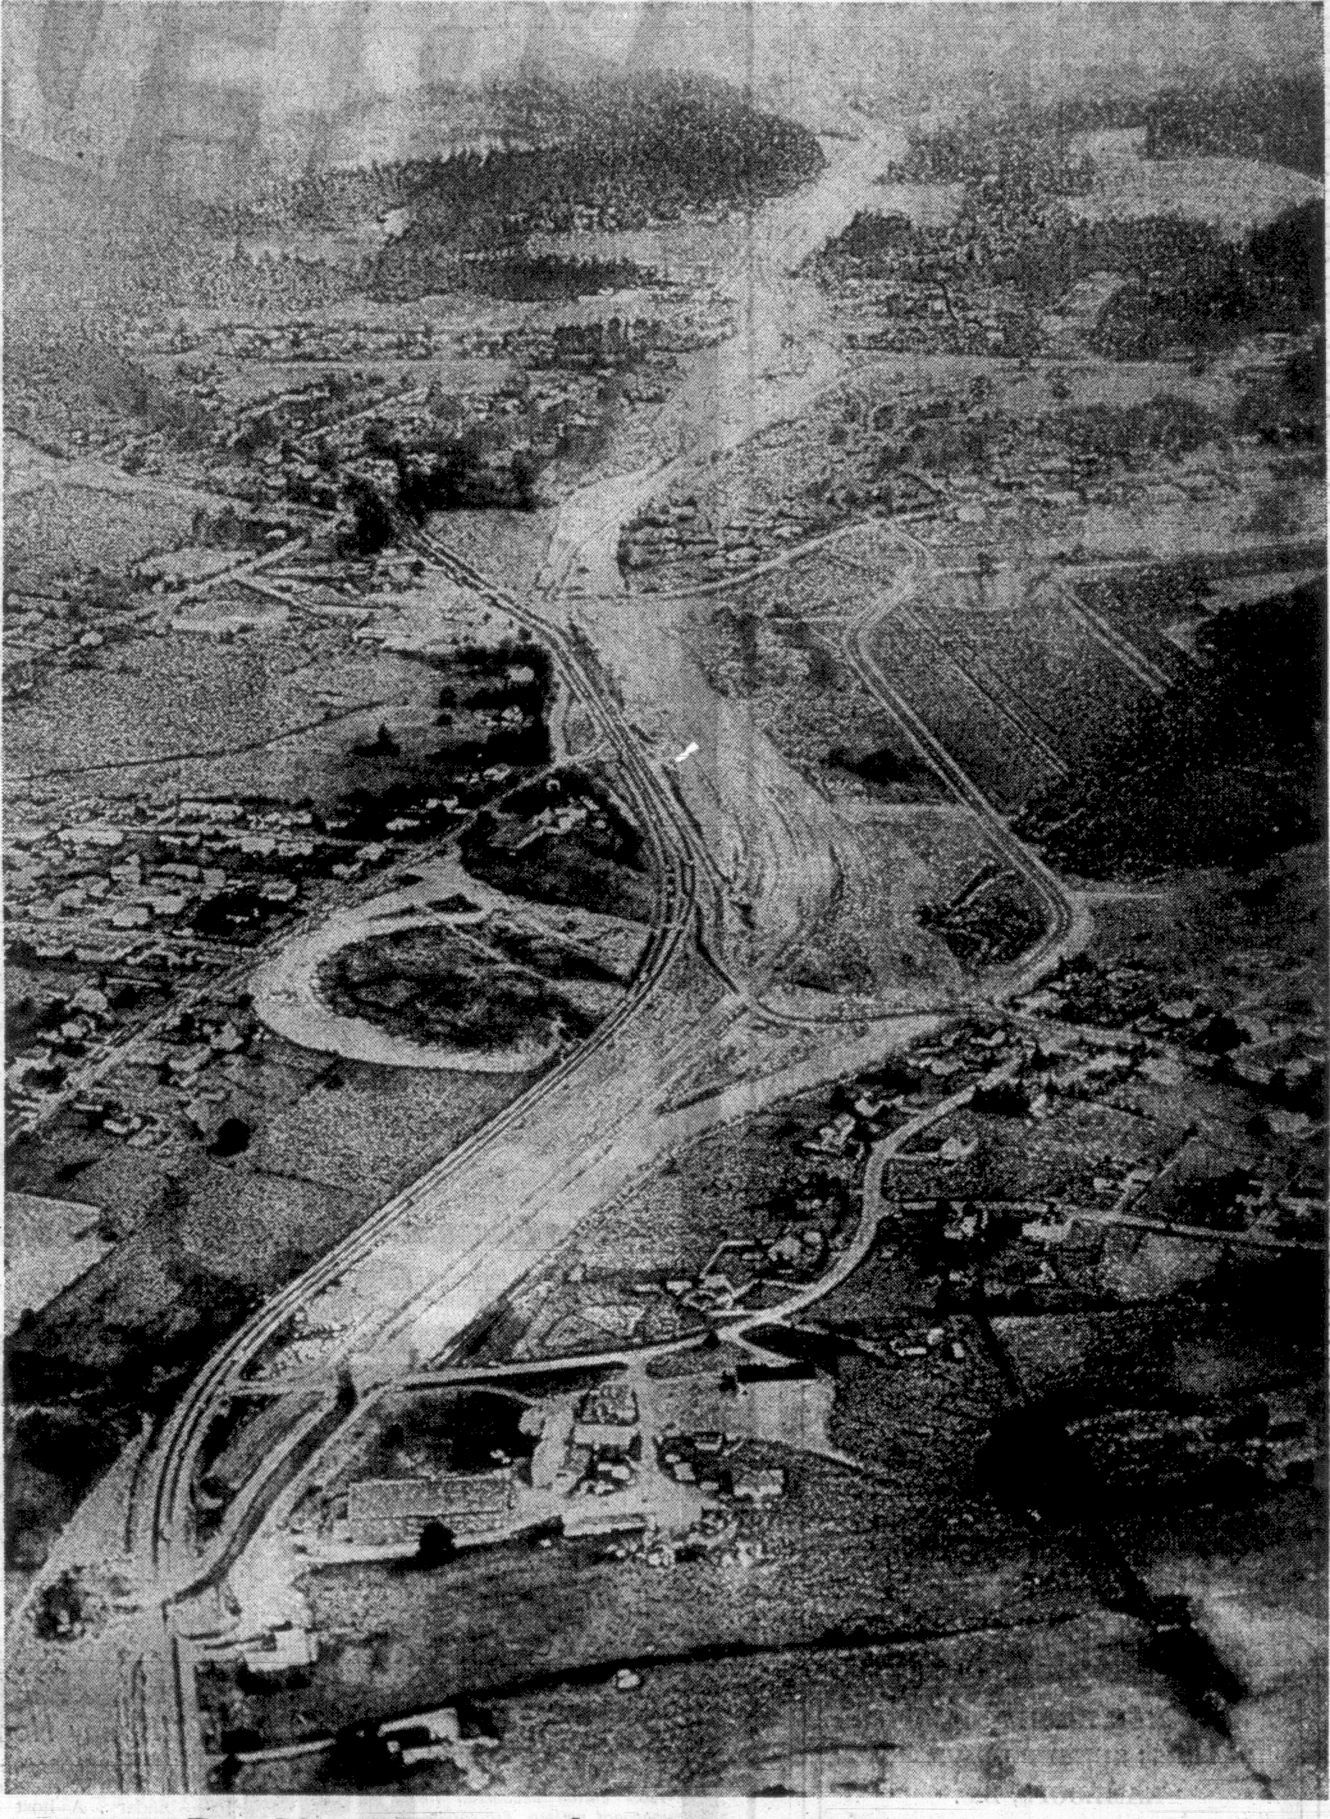
Thomas said the PUC has advised the company it cannot act on the application to end service by the requested date and therefore that date is suspended.

No indication was given when the PUC will deal with the matter.

JEWELRY STOLEN

An American visitor who stopped to shoot a round of golf at Uplands Golf Club Tuesday was robbed of $1,450 in jewelry when his car was ransacked on the club parking lot.

Samuel Taylor, of Portland, reported the theft of a wedding band and diamond ring valued at $1,200, a diamond watch worth $250, $7 cash and a number of credit cards, Oak Bay police said.



Do You Know the Way to Swartz Bay?

People driving the Pat Bay Highway through Royal Oak these days hope the highways department knows what it's doing — because no one else does. Lighter stripe running up photo indicates where giant earth movers and lime green dump trucks have stripped away soil and rock to expose clay. Street to right off highway at bottom is Dieppe. Elk Lake shows at top of photo. In between, it's a mess. A four-lane divided highway with overpasses will emerge, sometime next year. Pilot Jim Murdoch took Times photographer Bill Halkett up for a look this morning and realized it's easier to fly the route now than drive it.

APPEAL GOAL $701,314

Emotional Send-Off for Campaign

The 1970 United Red Feather-Red Cross Appeal drive officially opened Tuesday with an emotional plea for brotherly love from campaign chairman Commodore R. V. Henning and entertainer Bill Kenny.

Lieutenant-Governor John Nicholson also attended the luncheon at the Old Forge, and in a brief speech said the appeal had the joint support of all Greater Victoria mayors.

"You see, the only time they can speak with one voice is when they're out of town," Nicholson said, referring to the fact that area mayors are in Penticton this week for a convention of the Union of B.C. Municipalities.

His remarks brought good-natured laughter from the audience.

Then Kenny, leader of the original Ink Spots, made a long and moving plea for charity after which Henning said he'd planned to end with a few more words about the Appeal's 1970 member agencies, but didn't feel he could add to Kenny's speech.

This year the United Appeal hopes to raise $701,314.

Pony Leaguers Bolster Fund

Donations continued to roll in today and push the fund that will be used to send Victoria Centennials to the world amateur baseball championship in November nearer to the half-way mark.

Through the efforts of local baseball organizations and interested individuals the fund now stands at over $1,100.

Carmarvon Pony League pitched in today with a donation of $50.

On Tuesday the Senior Amateur League, from which the majority of players on the national team will be selected following Centennials' triumph in the Canadian championship, and the Cone Mack League each added $25.

Fud objective is $3,500 which the team needs for equipment, uniforms and walking-out dress for the tourney in Colombia. These items are not covered in the grant from the Canadian Baseball Association or the federal government, which is paying 75 per cent of the travel costs.

Donations will be accepted by either mail or in person at Bell's Men's Wear, 721 Yates; Imperial Centre (Al Kubicek), Hillside and Shelbourne; Canada Trust, 650 View Street; or the Ingraham Hotel, 2915 Douglas Street.

MAN OVERBOARD, SPINNAKER TROUBLES HAMPER GRETEL

INTREPID AHEAD BY ALMOST SIX MINUTES

Protests Were Only Part of Uproarious Day on Waves

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — Intrepid is the winner of the first race for the America's Cup.

And then again maybe she isn't.

Both the Americans and the Australians of Gretel II are protesting after Intrepid's five-minute, 52-second victory Tuesday in the initial contest of the best-of-7 series.

The alleged foul occurred at the start.

But that was only the beginning one of the most uproarious days in the history of the 119-year-old trophy.

Before the windy day was over there were these other developments:

1. Gretel II's forstay looked like a laundry line for six minutes after a disastrous spinnaker set.
2. Gretel II lost a man overboard.
3. Gretel II lost use of her main coffee grinder winches.
4. Gretel II showed she could conceivably win some races this month.

The protest is the first in cup racing since 1934 when Britain's Endeavor claimed foul against the American J-boat, Rainbow, to no avail.

At the time the New York Yacht Club race committee refused to hear the complaint causing one wag to write: "Britania rules the waves but America waives the rules."

The NYYC race committee said it would announce its decision of Tuesday's protest at a news conference at 1 p.m. today.

If it decides in Gretel II's favor, it will be only the seventh victory for a foreign boat in the 69 races for the Cup. The United States has won all 20 prior challenges.

The disputed foul apparently occured in a port-starboard S situation about four minutes before the starting gun. The boat on the starboard tack has the right of way when converging with a port tack boat.

Nobody was talking publicly about the alleged foul, but Gretel II's skipper, Jim Hardy, evidently feels he had to avoid a collision while on starboard tack with Intrepid, skippered by Bill Ficker, apparently on post.

Red protest flags flew from the lower shrouds of the two 12-mtre yachts.

Ficker, to windward, and Hardy, crossed the starting line almost together although Gretel II appeared to have closed off the wind briefly to avoid going over early.

It was a close race up the first leg into a staff 18-20 knot easterly blow that carried a cold rain with it. There was little tacking and Intrepid held only a six-length lead rounding the first mark.

Gretel II started to set a spinnaker for the second leg, a reach, but it jammed halfway up and stayed jammed for six minutes. A stuck shackle prevented Gretel's crew from getting the chute down.

When they did and set a second spinnaker, Intrepid had double her lead. Hardy lost only nine seconds at the second mark, demonstrating his boat's notable recovery powers downwind.

Asked how he managed to keep in contention despite the goof, Hardy joked later: "Just skill."

But after passing the mark and starting the third leg, foredeckman Paul Salmon, 32, lost his footing, possibly due to an oily slick on the deck, and fell into the ocean.

Gretel II's tender, Chaperone, headed for Salmon but Hardy came around and fished him out while Intrepid sailed on and on.

From there in it was a walkover with Ficker sailing conservatively, far ahead of the Aussies. On the sixth and last leg, it was a beat into a wind that veered more southerly and dropped to about 14 knots.

Hardy picked up a respectable 23 seconds on Ficker, lending hope for the future particularly since he was sailing with the broken winches which happened a little earlier.

BILL WALKER

Only the names and the faces change. They always will. The patterns don't, and never will. They are an integral part of the game itself.

It's fall-training time for the professional hockey player, the pre-season look-see that will separate the real pro from the kids trying to get his job, the men from would-be pretenders to the title, and eventually, the coach from his senses.

This is a complex business, and for the Los Angeles Kings even more so because this is the year when they have to get up off the floor of the western division of the NHL where they found themselves last spring.

And there are 66 of the Kings, minus a couple of the real good ones, who are in our town in an attempt to try and convince general manager and coach Larry Regan that they can help him get the job done this winter.

And it's not that difficult to spot the old-timers. They are more relaxed, know what's coming next, but are in no hurry to take the lead in the morning canter around Beacon Hill Park, either. Who cares? Ah, but someone does. All "jakers" are reported.

Then there is the eager youngster in the NHL for the first time. He has the new jackets, the glistening shoes, the darting eyes, and he's the first one on, and last one off, the ice.

Maybe someone will notice. That's what he's here for.

It can happen.

Ask one King rookie.

•

It was late at night one day last week when Regan was approached by a nice-looking youngster with a beautiful head of curls.

"Mr. Regan, I'm Curly Gordon," the player introduced himself.

"Pleased to meet you, Curly," Mr. Regan answered," and I know you will be having your hair cut tomorrow, won't you?" he added.

"Yes, Mr. Regan," was the polite reply, and that's how Curly Gordon lost his nickname and became a King statistic. (He was plain NO. 62: GORDON before his release Tuesday.)

But then, they are all numbers at training camp. Dick Duff is No. 8. Bob Berry is 23. You may see Berry's number but you may not see Duff's. The old sweats don't go for that kid stuff. Most of them have ripped the incriminating insignia off their jerseys. If they're not known well enough, too bad. That's their thinking. The board of control for the Kings can figure it out.

And if you've never been to a training camp, you've missed something, so try and go. Because there is a board of control, and it works something like this.

Down on the ice Regan, and Jim Anderson, a former WHL coach, and now a scout for the Kings, are putting the players through their paces, in shifts. Upstairs in the stands, ex-Victoria Maple Leaf coach Rudy Pilous and ex-King, and current Springfield coach John Wilson are armed with all the evidence they need.

•

If they are interested, the numbers match names. That's why the rookies show theirs.

Meanwhile, on the ice it's wave after wave of forward lines. "You do it this way," says Regan. The defenceman passes the puck to the centre who gives it to the left wing, who passes it back immediately to the centre, who gives it to the right wing, who makes a drop pass to the left wing, who scores from in front.

System, system, system, that's what Regan is stressing. A different system than the Kings employed unsuccesfully last year.

Then reverse it; do it from the other side. The two human computers in the stands are recording each player's performance. Was he in position; how did he take the pass; did he keep his head up; did he keep up?

The play looks fine when it works, but if it doesn't, so what? That was Eddie Shack's attitude. He would do it his way and did. Because this was his trademark. Nothing had changed.

Then Anderson had a remark or two.

"Do what you're told, and pass to the guy who is open, not across the rink to a guy who is covered," he growled.

Fundamentals for pro players. They still need lessons.

Upstairs Pilous pointed to a player, looked at his tell-tale sheet, and spoke to Wilson. The Springfield coach nodded in apparent assent. They had spotted something. A note was made.

Perhaps it was Jean Potvin. Here was a holdover from former King coach Hal Laycoe's thinking.

It had been recommended by Laycoe last year that Potvin be acquired from Montreal for perusal, and future considerations by the Kings if they decided to keep him. Potvin turned out to be a star with Springfield in last year's AHL playoffs. He had just been clipped on the side of the head.

•

"He's been having a good camp," volunteered Jiggs McDonald, radiocaster with the Kings. If Potvin makes it, that consideration may mean a draft choice. They usually do.

Larry Cahan skated by, and looked good in his moderate mod style. The loving care was working for one of the Kings' tough guys. The grey area had been eliminated.

But who was missing?

Bob Pulford is due in today from Toronto. "There should be no problem there," Regan said last week.

But there was no word from Eddie Joyal. He still figures he's a free agent, which naturally suggests a trade. Would it be Joyal? Could be, because Pete Stemkowski is available. Or is Cowboy Bill Flett trade material? The question concerned a rumor, but went unanswered.

By now, those killing wind sprints were winding up the morning session. And if the most eager of the rookies hadn't been noticed before, they were sure to be now. They were out in front. The veterans were back in the ruck.

Perhaps those nice chaps upstairs would notice, and jot down their number.

But alas, no!

Pilous and Wilson were long gone.

They had been through all this before, too.

THE U.S. SUBMARINE INTREPID

Spray is tossed fore and aft and America's Cup sloop Intrepid looks almost like submarine Tuesday as she is towed to sea in heavy winds for first race of cup series against Australian challenger Gretel II. It was wild day on water as U.S. defender defeated Gretel II by almost six minutes and both skippers lodged protests, which were to be considered during meeting today. (AP Wirephoto.)

Track Lesson—Swedish Style

EDMONTON (CP)—Judges at the Sweden-Canada track and field competition Tuesday could have used a photo-finish machine.

Sweden had a 106-71 over-all point margin at the half-way point of the two-day meet and was outstanding in a few events.

But Canada's competitors pressed hard, and in several track events only tenths of a second marked the difference in the four-man fields.

The men's relay, a 4 x 100-yards event, had the Canadian and Swedish runners running almost step-for-step and the final two breasted the tape stride-for-stride.

Judges recorded a one-tenth-second time difference in awarding the race to Sweden.

Canada's men turned in excellent performances in the short-distance races. Craig Blackman and Tony Powell, both of Toronto, finished first and second in the 400 metres and Charles Francis and John Swainson, also both of Toronto, finished one-two in the 100 metres.

FINISHES FIRST

Francis finished first in the same event at the Norway-Canada dual meet in Winnipeg last week. His chances look good when the three nations meet in Victoria Sept. 19-20.

Powell and Blackman reversed their order from the Winnipeg meet, and coaches were optimistic about their chances in the three-nation event.

Two Canadian women won events Tuesday. Abigail Hoffman of Toronto won the 800 metres and Marlene Kurt of Edmonton the discus.

Sweden finished first in 13 of 17 events. Both the Swedish men's and women's teams lead in points, the men 72-45 and the women 34-26.

Coaches for the Canadian team were not concerned about the standings, but were unanimous that the international competition provided by the dual nation meets were what Canadian athletes need.

Kings Trim Club; Pulford Expected

Los Angeles Kings of the National Hockey League dropped seven amateurs from their 62-player training camp roster in Memorial Arena on Tuesday.

Kings' coach Larry Regan tempered the announcement with a statement that, with some seasoning, several of the youngsters might return to pro ranks.

Among those cut were John Morrison of Flin Flon, Greg Gordon of Carleton College, John Donnelly from Loyola and Garth Ryan from Cornell University.

Kings meanwhile are expecting the arrival today or Thursday of newly-acquired Bob Pulford from Toronto as well as the veteran Eddie Joyal. Pulford is engaged in closing off some business commitments in Toronto.

Tickets are now on sale at the Memorial Arena box office for the NHL exhibition games Kings will play here against Chicago Black Hawks (Sept. 30), Vancouver Canucks (Oct. 3) and Toronto Maple Leafs (Oct. 7).

IKE FIRES CLINCHER AFTER JOINING UNITED

Ike MacKay returned to Victoria's Pacific Coast Soccer League squad with a flourish on Tuesday.

MacKay, who played last season with Portadown of the Irish League, blasted in the clinching goal during the second half Tuesday to help Victoria United to a 2-0 exhibition victory over Victoria West of the District League's first division at Topaz Park.

Rookie Jan Bentley counted the other United goal.

Manager-coach Frank Grealy of United, busy preparing his side for the opening PCSL match with Vancouver Eintracht at 2 p.m. Saturday in Royal Athletic Park, announced the signing of MacKay the same night.

Surgery On Knee For Brewer Star

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Outfielder Danny Walton of Milwaukee Brewers underwent surgery on his right kneecap Monday.

The hard-hitting left-fielder, up among the American League leads in both home runs and runs batted in early in the season, injured his knee Aug. 28 at Baltimore.

BUDGET COMMITTEE . . . . . . RECOMMENDS WITHDRAWAL

McGill Sports Program in Peril

MONTREAL (CP) — For the first time since 1898, McGill University is considering withdrawal from intercollegiate competition.

And by this time next year, McGill's extensive intercollegiate program in 17 sports — including football in which McGill Redmen are current Ontario-Quebec Intercollegiate Athletic Association champions — could be a thing of the past.

The withdrawal is the recommendation of the university's committee on budget cuts, which has proposed among other things that intercollegiate sports be suspended in 1971-72 to save about $200,000. Intramural sports programs will be retained.

Although the cut is only a recommendation, Harry Griffiths, director of athletics, has no doubt that the writing is on the wall.

"The recommendations were made by a committee which include all the top officials of the university, so I expect they will be approved by the senate and board of governors," said Griffiths Tuesday.

"A total of some 300 students who now particpate in inter-university competition will be affected."

Griffiths added that "an awful lot of students and graduates who do not participate in these sports still derive benefit from them."

McGill played in the first football game in North America in 1874 againt Harvard and the first true ice hockey was played in Montreal by McGill teams in 1857.

Griffiths said that although he isn't planning to make any kind of actual appeal, he entertains a hope that the athletics program will be saved.

"The only way we could go on operating would be if some unknown source came up with the money. . . . All we can hope for is that some angel will come through."

Pirates Take Leading Role In NL Drama

By The Associated Press

One, two, three.

Pittsburgh Pirates, Chicago Cubs and New York Mets are doing their number.

The names and places may change . . . but the characters usually remain the same.

Willie Stargell stayed in character with a three-run homer that powered Pittsburgh over Philadelphia Phillies 8-3; Billy Williams did his hitting thing to pace Chicago over St. Louis Cardinals 5-3, and Montreal Expos tripped New York 5-4 on an uncharacteristic bad pitch by Jerry Koosman in the National League's dramatic east race Tuesday.

The Pirates thus pulled a full game ahead of the Cubs and the Mets, who changed places after Tuesday's developments. Chicago now is second, less than a percentage point over third-place New York.

I LIKE IT

"I liked the way we bounced back after Sunday's game," said Pirate manager Danny Murtaugh, referring to Pittsburgh's 3-2 loss at Chicago when Matty Alou dropped a twoout fly in the ninth.

"We disregarded Sunday and went out and played like nothing happened."

Williams, who capped that rally Sunday with a two-run double, took advantage of another misplayed ball to drive in the tie-breaking run Tuesday with a sixth-inning single.

"To win, you have to take advantage of the breaks," said Williams.

And Koosman, who let Tuesday's game get away by giving the Expos a wild-pitch tying-run in the 10th before they scored the clincher, had this refrain:

"I'll probably replay that last wild pitch throughout the winter. It's the type of thing you can't forget."

Houston rolled over west division-pacing Cincinnati Reds 9-2, San Francisco Giants hammered Atlanta Braves 8-0 and Los Angeles Dodgers edged San Diego Padres 5-4 in other National League games.

MAZEROSKI AGREES

Bill Mazeroski, who had a solo homer along with Rich Hebner in Pittsburgh's long-ball offence at Philadelphia, expressed sentiments similar to Murtaugh's.

"We could have had a letdown after Sunday," the Pirates magic-glove second baseman said, "it could have worked either way . . . but it worked for the best."

Stargell's 30th homer off Barry Lersch got Pittsburgh off to a 3-0 lead in the first and Hebner and Mazeroski jolted successive homers in the fifth.

John Bateman's bases-loaded single capped Montreal's two-run rally in the 10th that wiped out Tommy Agee's go-ahead homer in the top of the frame.

ORIOLES CLOSE IN

In the American League, Baltimore Orioles moved closer to their second consecutive eastern division title by defeating Washington Senators, 6-2. The magic number for the Orioles now is two. The New York Yankees prevented a pennant cinching for Baltimore by winning a double bill from Boston Red Sox, 8-6 and 3-2.

Minnesota Twins also moved in on the western title by edging California Angels 7-5 in the first game of a day-night double header, then lost the second game, 5-3. Elsewhere, Cleveland Indians edged Detroit Tigers, 4-3, and Oakland Athletics split a double-header with Milwaukee Brewers, winning 6-5, after losing 1-0.

Karate Mixes Mind, Muscle, Concentration

By STEWART LANG

Lindon Bateson, standing five-foot-eight and weighing in at a trim 140 pounds, does not look particularly formidable at a quick glance.

But any troublemaker tackling Lindon might quickly learn that hasty appraisals can be misleading.

For the 22-year-old Bateson is an active disciple in an ancient art of self-defence which forms the basis of a rapidly-growing sport in both Europe and North America — karate.

Several theories exist as to the origins of karate, which literally translated means "empty hands."

One states that the infighting technique grew out of a religious ritual started by a Buddhist monk in India around the year 520 AD.

Another version holds that it began in Okinawa during the early 17th century out of a form of Chinese boxing known as "kempo."

Those and other theories probably contain elements of the truth and there is no doubt that extensive development came about in Japan, where the sport was introduced early in this century.

Truth and faction are difficult to separate in the mists of history and the background and myraid forms of karate have been dealt with at length by other writers. Out of it all comes one basic fact — a karate expert can kill or maim using only his hands and bare feet.

For this reason, potential students of the discipline are carefully screened to weed out undesirables.

Which is where Bateson comes into the picture.

He is in Victoria to open a karate school at 1323 Quadra Street, not easy to miss with the fluorescent lettering on a window.

Bateson holds a second-degree black belt after six years of diligent effort and has been instructing for four.

Colored belts are awarded for ascending degrees of proficiency in karate, starting with white and working up through yellow, orange, green, blue, brown and black.

●

Beyond that there is only the red belt — held by approximately 20 men in the world.

Bateson came to Calgary from England, where he spent the first 11 years of his life, and moved to Regina nine years later.

Both he and his older brother, Edward became interested in karate while in Calgary and later opened a school in Regina. Ed now runs the Regina school and the brothers have two other schools in operation at Weyburn and Moose Jaw.

Expansion plans include both Victoria and Qu-Appelle, Sask.

Bateson, while explaining some of the mental concentration required in karate, managed to destroy a popular misconception about the sport.

This concerns the buildup of callous tissue on the edge of a karate expert's hand.

Bateson said some acquire it by persistent pounding of their fists against a hard surface, but he found that it wasn't necessary.

"After all," he said. "I have a beautiful girl friend and I'm sure she wouldn't want to hold hands with a club."

Despite the lack of the horny-edged appendage, Bateson managed to break seven (one and five-eighth inch thick) filler blocks with one blow while demonstrating his ability before a television camera in Regina. He later added that he would be willing to put on demonstrations of this type "anywhere and anytime" in Victoria.

He conveys the idea that karate is a complex intermingling of both mental and physical energies, which involve intense concentration, controlled breathing and the right type of motion.

●

He likened it to a fire-hose. While filled with flowing water, the hose is almost impossible to bend, but empty, can be folded with ease.

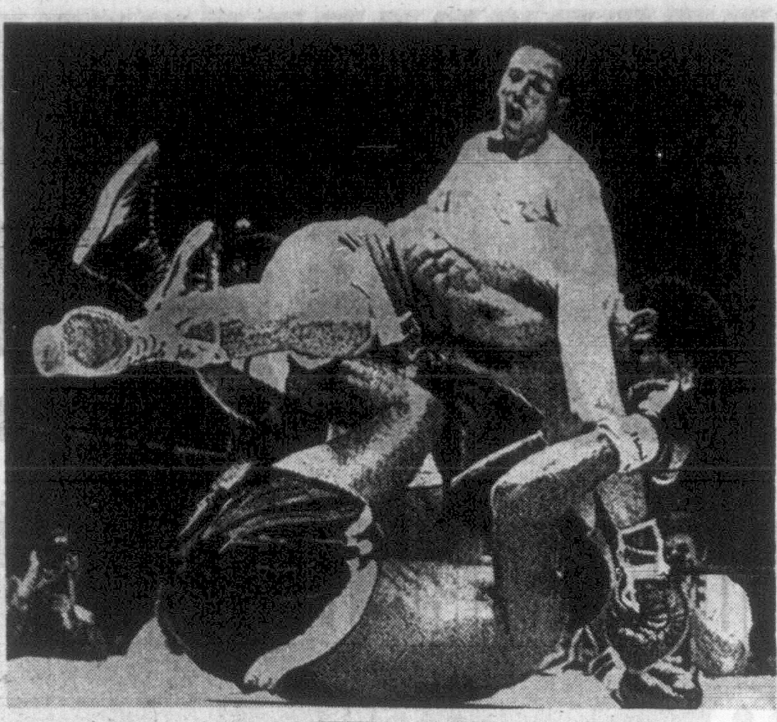
Strength is poured into the striking motion rather than locked against your opponent, as in wrestling. For this reason, neophytes to the art are taught exercises to lengthen muscles, rather than build them up.

Precision timing is important because in tournaments the points are scored for blows that could have landed, but stop barely short of contact.

It has been said that "seeing is believing" and those who wish to observe the skills of karate can drop in and watch Lindon and his students almost any weekday afternoon.

Ski Sites Picked

TORONTO (CP) — The North American Nordic ski championship — cross-country and jumping — have been awarded to two areas of the Collingwood district, 75 miles north of here. They will be held Jan. 30, 1971, and the following weekend.



ONLY FLOYD FINISHED ON FEET

Returning to ring after absence of two years, Floyd Patterson falls on back and Charlie Green comes tumbling after during first round of heavyweight bout Tuesday night in New York. Green was man on canvas at finish, losing by knockout at 1:57 of 10th round. Fighting from fifth round with blood streaming from cut over left eye, favored Patterson decked Green with left hook to body followed by right to jaw and earned ovation from crowd of 10,809 that paid $72,985. Banning of Five Lifters Brings on Mini Cold War

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — A mini cold war hovered over the world weightlifting championships today after officials Tuesday night disqualified five competitors—all from Iron Curtain countries—on charges of taking stimulants.

Delegation leaders from the Soviet Union, Poland and Hungary, the nations whose weightlifters were disqualified, threatened to quit the championships and take their squads home.

Among those charged with taking the stimulant phenylethylamine were Sandor Holezreiter of Hungary, who won the 1970 flyweight crown on the opening night Saturday.

Of the first three finishers in the flyweight and bantamweight divisions, only bantamweight king Mohammad Nassiri was not stripped of his medal.

TESTS POSITIVE

Disqualified after urine specimen tests proved positive, in addition to Holczreiter, were flyweights Walter Szoltysek of Poland and V. Smetanin of the U.S.S.R. and bantamweights Imre Foldi of Hungary and Henry Trebicki of Poland.

Clarence Johnson of Detroit, president of the International Weightlifting Federation, said the disqualifications would stand despite strong protests by the Soviets, Poles and Hungarians at a press conference after Tuesday night's action.

Arkady Lenz, head of the Soviet delegation, called the tests "a frame up." He said the U.S.S.R. team, the defending champions, are considering leaving the event which extends through Sunday unless the methods of testing are changed.

Winners Fire 10-Under 60

Dental technician Bill Kirstine and veterinarian Ray Cranston produced the right combination Monday to grab top honors in the fifth annual Hy's Invitational tournament at Uplands Golf Club.

They scored a net 60, 10 under par, to win the best-ball, handicap event by one stroke. Runners-up were George Ray and Rod Hood while the team of Fraser McColl and Clare Anderson finished third.

Kirstine and Cranston also earned the right to compete in Hy's all-Canada playoff in Vancouver later this month.

Racquet Club Net Tourney

Victoria Racquet Club members will compete for the club tennis championship starting tonight and continuing through the finals on Saturday, Sept. 26.

City men's champion Ernie Cockayne is first seeded ahead of city runner-up Marty Taylor and third-ranked Roger Skillings, former under-16 Canadian champion now attending the University of Victoria.

Sally Wood will be defending the distaff title.

Tonight's 5:30 draw:

Roger Skillings vs. Don Senese; Sheila Bell and Wendy Smith vs. Ellen Arlidge and Renata Van Ilberg; Doug Dickie and George Walton vs. Len Anderson and Maurice Ayers; Peter Mason and Doug Steick vs. Dunc Morrison and Bill Smith.

Jago Wins Shoe Title

DUNCAN — Roy Jago of Victoria compiled an unbeaten record of six games Sunday to top the "A" class in the round-robin Vancouver Island horseshoe pitching championships at the Legion courts.

Another Victorian, Ray Leechman captured second place after a sudden-death playoff against Murray Rayner of Youbou.

Aubrey Newton of Youbou won the "B" class with a 6-1 record while Dennis Ramshaw of Courtenay nailed down runner-up honors after eliminating Colin Butts of Victoria in a playoff.

Victoria's Ken West and W. Quesnel of Duncan each finished with 6-1 record in the "C" class but Quesnel took the title after a tie-breaker.

Mel Kyisle of Courtenay capture the "D" class crown while Norris White of Victoria finished in the runner-up spot.

Salmonbelly Hitting Surprise to Lakers

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP)—Coach Bobby Allan isn't particularly worried that his Peterborough Lakers are down one game in the best-of-seven Canadian senior lacrosse final.

The Lakers got off to a fast start but petered out in the late going to drop a 16-12 decision to New Westminster Salmonbellies before 4,000 fans in Queens Park arena Tuesday night.

But Allan said later he was satisfied with his team's performance, particularly in view of it being the Lakers' first game in 10 days.

"We'll win our share of games before the series is over," he said.

"Our checking wasn't that strong and we gave away too many rebounds in our own zone. But we'll get stronger by the next game."

Second game in the Mann Cup series will be played Thursday and the third, Saturday. The fourth game is set for Monday, with other games, if necessary, scheduled Sept. 22, 24 and 26. All games will be played here.

GOALIE AILING

Allan said goaltender Pat Baker was not up to par in the opening game and has not fully recovered from a recent virus infection.

He said the Salmonbellies surprised him with their heavy checking and that he will likely bring in 200-pound defenceman Ron Liscomb from Brooklin Redmen for the remainder of the series.

"Liscomb is a hitter and it looks like we're going to need hitters."

PARNELL FIRES FOUR

The Lakers also got off to a slow start in last year's final against New Westminster, but fought back to win the series in seven games.

Allan said the New Westminster players who hurt the Lakers most were forward Paul Parnell, an ex-Peterborough player, who scored four goals, and 220-pound Al Lewthwaite, who stopped incoming Peterborough forwards with jarring checks.

New Westminster coach Cliff Sepka said he was pleased with his team's effort and did not plan any lineup changes for the second game.

ESCAPE INJURIES

Both clubs came out of the opener injury free.

The Salmonbellies will likely pay closer attention to Peterborough's John Davis in the second game.

Davis scored four goals in the opener and put on one of the best stick-handling displays seen in the West in several years.

Wayne Goss and Mac Tyler backed up Parnell for Salmonbellies with three goals apiece. Larry Henry had two, and single goals were scored by Lewthwaite, Ken Winzoski, Ed Goss and Jim Giles.

Squad Game To Provide Last Chance

Many eyes may possibly be watching the "sneak peak" exhibition game put on by players at the Victoria Cougars' training camp Saturday at 8 p.m. in Memorial Arena.

But to the players themselves, only one pair of eyes really matter.

Those belong to coach Ron Maxwell, who is rapidly whittling his B.C. Junior Hockey League entry into a more manageable size in preparation for next Wednesday's exhibition contest against Calgary Centennials.

Saturday's tussle between holdovers and newcomers may well be the last chance for some of the aspiring players to prove themselves.

Admission to the game is $1, with students and old-age pensioners being charged 50 cents.

Meanwhile, Cougars are looking for room and board for six players. Anyone wishing to help is asked to telephone Bob Reid at 385-8951.

VETERAN all-round athlete Gordie Whan died in Duncan Tuesday of an apparent heart attack. Best known in recent years for golfing activities, Whan won the Cowichan Golf Club championship 14 times and was consistent contender in Island tournaments. He had been working in Duncan for two years after 20 years as head loader for Hillcrest Lumber.

CHORAL SPECIALIST SETS HIGH STANDARDS

They'll Tour When 'Better Than Good'

JIM JOHNSON
. . . starts at Brentwood College

By DONNA CLEMENTS

MILL BAY — Brentwood College here has hired choral specialist Jim Johnson in a drive to establish a choral tradition in the school.

Johnson, 46, said he will help the independent school move to more artistic thinking.

"We are going to establish choral tradition" he said. "We want Brentwood College to be famous for our choirs as well as other athletic and cultural activities."

Johnson said he has selected 60 boys, between Grades 8 and 12, and they will start training next week.

●

"I intend to set a high choral standard," he said. "The public will hear the choir when this has been attained."

If these goals are reached by February a concert will be held. Hopefully, the boys' performance will be combined with a choir from Queen Margaret's School trained by Johnson.

Johnson, who trained the combined choirs last year, was teaching at Brentwood three days a week. This year he is a staff member of the school. As well as being a choral specialist he teaches English.

"We plan to enter the choir in festivals in Vancouver Island and Vancouver and it will be part of the B.C. competitions in Vancouver in the spring," Johnson said.

He said there are also tentative tour plans for the choir after it is "better than good."

Johnson, who has trained many choirs, said he is enthused with the plans and compared the project to making a house out of rough lumber.

He said working with the amateur singers is "much more fun than working with professionals."

When the boys leave the Choir Johnson said they will be well versed in choral music and voice production and will have been exposed to a wide variety of choral literature.

Working in the field of music as a professional choral specialist was the most natural career for Johnson because it always has been his first love.

"I have sung all of my life," said the third oldest child of a family of eight children.

Johnson, who excels on the piano, guitar and bass, was raised in St. Louis.

When he was in grade four he had his own quartet called the "Kinsmen." He said the group, consisting of the same four boys for the 10 years they performed together, appeared on television and radio in the states.

"When I was 20 I was a professional boxer. I had nine professional fights and had won the Golden Gloves championship."

Johnson said his father, who was a minister, thought "singing was no way to make a living" and advised him that eventually he could be seriously injured if he continued with boxing.

●

He then attended University of St. Louis, Illinois and Denver, Colorado finishing with his master's degree in arts.

After being choral conductor in the U.S. Army, and conducting choral groups and concerts for television and radio in Denver, Johnson decided to come to Canada.

As an artist Johnson said he felt he would be freer to work in Canada without encountering as much professional prejudice because he is black.

His successful career in Canada started in Prince George in 1954 where he taught in the public schools. During his six years there Johnson formed a community choir called the "Cariboo Chorus" which toured to the 13 largest cities in B.C. in 1958 under the sponsorship of the B.C. government.

In 1960 he moved to Nanaimo where he commuted to Vancouver to work for CBC.

As well as conducting variety shows, he toured the province for CBC with "Jazz on Tour" along with Lance Harrison's Dixieland band.

In 1964 Johnson went to teach at Lake Cowichan Senior Secondary.

●

During this phase of his teaching career he had his own television series for 13 weeks in 1968 called "Moods of Man."

Last year he toured with his partner Harry Aoki as "The Moods of Man" for the Overture Concert Association in Vancouver.

Johnson and his Japanese partner, who plays bass violin and classical harmonica, have been performing as a folk concert duo in the U.S., Canada and Europe for the past 15 years.

Every concert season they entertain college, university and concert hall audiences.

10 Months' Ice At Lake Arena

LAKE COWICHAN — The new $392,000 Lake Cowichan Arena will provide an ice surface 10 months of the year, Doug Anderson, newly-appointed manager, told the Chamber of Commerce Tuesday night.

Anderson, former coach and manager of the Victoria Cougars, said the skating and curling complex is the finest of its size he's seen.

"A tremendous amount of foresight has gone into this arena," he said. "The arena commission has put something into this building to be proud of."

NOV. 1 OPENING

"I say this with crossed fingers because anything can happen but, if everything goes as it is, I can see the arena opening not later than the first of November.

"Nov. 1 is a good starting date and all types of people are already asking for ice time. By then the bleachers may not be finished but the main aspect is a sheet of ice."

Anderson said he is looking at the 200 by 85 foot hockey rink as potential training facility for professional teams.

He said the Vancouver Canucks this year have gone to Calgary to train and the Los Angeles Kings are in Victoria.

"With the facilities at Lake Cowichan I don't see why they won't come here," he said.

"With a seating capacity of 1,000 and an additional standing capacity of 500 persons, exhibition games could be financially successful," he stressed.

As well as curling, hockey, public and figure skating during the season, Anderson said he hopes the summer activities will include hockey schools, summer bonspiels and a figure skating school.

Duke's Lawyer Seeks to Halt Hearing

TORONTO (CP) — Lawyers in an inquiry into alleged connections between the provincial police and men associated with organized crime today moved into the Ontario Court of Appeal.

There Harvey Daiter, counsel for Oakville, Ont., businessman George Duke, was to apply for an order to restrain Mr. Justice Campbell Grant from continuing the inquiry.

Mr. Daiter argues that testimony given at the inquiry could be prejudicial to a libel action by Duke which has not yet come to trial.

Mr. Justice Grant said Tuesday the inquiry would resume at 2 p.m. today unless the Appeal Court rules otherwise.

Mr. Daiter told the hearing Tuesday that he would call Mrs. Duke to the stand to testify that the evidence of Elizabeth Citron, linking his client with senior provincial police officers and alleged gangsters, has been "a pack of lies.'

The lawyer said Mrs. Duke has denied making any of the statements attributed to her in testimony during the last two days.

"I am sorry if it has come to that," Mrs. Citron said during cross-examination. "If she now says that it is because she is in fear of her life. She told me before the trial she was 100 per cent behind me."

SHULMAN STARTED IT

The trial mentioned was at Milton, Ont., last December when Duke pleaded guilty to a charge of threatening Mrs. Citron. He was ordered to post a $2,000 bond to keep the peace and was prohibited from carrying firearms outside his home.

The inquiry followed statements last June to a legislature committee by Dr. Morton Shulman, New Democratic Party member for Toronto High Park, that Duke was on friendly terms with OPP officers and with men associated with organized crime.

On the opening day of the inquiry Mrs. Citron repeated statements she said were made to her by Mr. and Mrs. Duke.

These were that Staff Supt. A. M. Rodger, Supt. Albert Wilson and Supt I. R. Robbie had used a Montreal hotel suite rented by Duke's lawn equipment firm during Expo 67 and that Supt Rodger and Supt. Wilson had used the Duke apartment in the Bahamas.

Supt. Wilson and Supt. Rodger have been suspended and face charges of disobeying an order to stop associating with Duke. Their hearing has been held over until the inquiry is completed. Supt. Robbie has died.

Mr. Daiter tried Tuesday to depict Mrs. Citron and her husband Geoffrey as an angry couple seeking public revenge against Duke for threatening Mrs. Citron with a gun in September, 1969.

WITNESS WEEPS

Mrs. Citron wept frequently during the cross-examination. Mr. Justice Grant admonished the lawyer several times for interrupting her and finally told her to confine herself to answering questions and refrain from emotional outbursts.

The Burlington, Ont., dress designer said she learned only the night before the December trial that it would be held in private and raised no objection at the time.

Later she became alarmed when friends told her of rumors that the privacy of the hearing had been at her request, that she had attempted to blackmail Duke into a cash settlement and that she had been having an affair with him. Mrs. Citron said there was no truth to the rumors.

Mr. Daiter said the gossip did not begin until after Mrs. Citron gave information to a Hamilton reporter after the case was disposed of.

ASKS ABOUT PROBE

Mrs. Citron said she talked to the newspaper reporter after Mrs. Duke told her in a telephone conversation following the court case: "You did it all for nothing, Elizabeth. He won out in the end."

Mr. Daiter asked her if she was aware that Mrs. Duke had carried on her own private investigation to determine if Duke had connections with three men alleged to be members of the Mafia—Dante Gabriel Gasbarrini, Johnny Papalia and Donald (Red) Lebarre.

She said she wasn't.

Mr. Daiter then asked her if she knew that the investigation had shown there was no connection between his client and the three men.

Mr. Justice Grant admonished the lawyer for his questioning. He asked how Mrs. Citron could know what the report said if she didn't know there had been an investigation.

Questioned by inquiry counsel J. J. Robinette, Mrs. Citron said Mrs. Duke told her she had hired a private investigator in 1968 to follow Duke because of an affair he was having with a woman identified as Marion Phillips.

Mrs. Citron said she understood the woman had an apartment in the Hamilton block in which Papalia had an apartment.

Mr. Robinette said the woman would be called as a witness.

Mrs. Citron quoted Supt. Rodger as saying "We're in it up to here" when he learned that Duke had a criminal record. She said she was told of the incident by Mr. and Mrs. Leo Slatter, who were friends of hers and of the superintendent.

PARKING SQUABBLE SPARKS WALKOUT

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two cars towed away from a staff parking lot at the British Columbia Vocational School in Burnaby sparked a walkout by more than 200 B.C. government employees Tuesday.

The walkout stems from a dispute over parking fees of $3 to $4 a month, recently instituted by the government. The union says parking rights are included in terms of employment.

Union members were to meet today to discuss the problem.

RESTRICTIONS ON FARM TRADE MAY SPREAD

Chicken-Egg War in Canada Feared

OTTAWA (CP) — Agriculture Minister H. A. Olson said today that restrictions on interprovincial trade in farm products are threatening to spread to other commodities.

He said a fast solution is necessary to the problem raised by some provinces restricting imports of farm products, such as chickens and eggs from other provinces.

Mr. Olson said there now is general agreement between the federal authority and the provinces that the problem is so serious that there is no time for a reference to the Supreme Court of Canada, to test the validity of the provincial marketing regulations.

Mr. Olson made his comments in an interview just before today's opening of the federal-provincial heads of government conference on economic matters, including the marketing problem.

5 PROVINCES INVOLVED

Premier Ed Schreyer of Manitoba said in a separate interview that he intends to stress the subject at the conference.

He said that four provinces have made restrictive marketing regulations in the last four months, and that a fifth is about to do so, He did not name them, but three are known to be Quebec, Ontario and British Columbia.

The marketing strife is becoming known in farm circles as the chicken-and-egg war.

Mr. Schreyer said a process of interprovincial economic retaliation is setting in and that it could end interprovincial free trade in farm products.

The ideal solution, he said, would be to have one national marketing board.

Mr. Schreyer said he has received no formal reply to his request to Prime Minister Trudeau two weeks ago to refer the matter to the Supreme Court of Canada to test validity of the provincial regulations.

Mr. Olson said he does not favor a Supreme Court reference because it would take too long.

"It is that serious," he said.

The situation was dangerous if a quick solution was not found.

Mr. Olson said he favors quick implementation of national marketing board legislation now before Parliament.

It proposes marketing boards for all farm products. The legislation will be dealt with when Parliament reconvenes Oct. 5.

Premier W. A. C. Bennett of British Columbia has publicly opposed the legislation on grounds that it would empower the federal cabinet rather than farm organizations, to appoint the boards.

Mr. Olson said the legislation will permit uniform application of marketing regulations across the country, and that this appeared to be the best solution to the problem.

Gerald W. Baldwin, Conservative House leader and MP for the Alberta farm riding of Peace River, has said that "present interprovincial restrictions are leading to the economic vulcanization of Canada.

Group Asks Subsidy End

TORONTO (CP) — The United States government's farm price support program is standing in the way of changes that would make farming in the U.S. profitable, the head of the American Farm Bureau Federation said Tuesday.

Charles Shuman of Sullivan, Ill., said that as long as U.S. farmers have government assistance it will be difficult to negotiate lifting of the restrictions on international trade in farm commodities.

He told delegates of the Chicago-based Farm and Industrial Equipment Institute and its Toronto-based affiliate, the Canadian Farm and Industrial Equipment Institute that attempts by the U.S. government to manage production cannot match the efficiency of the market place.

The 1.8-million-member farm bureau wants government subsidies, which amount to between $3,000 million and $4,000 million annually in recent years, phased out over a five-year period.

The farm bureau president said the role of government in agriculture should be limited to financing research and promoting a favorable economic and political climate.

G. K. Wade of Greenwood, Miss., president of the U.S.-based National Farm Power Equipment Dealers Association, predicted that new laws on franchising will likely be applied soon to the relationship between farm dealers and their suppliers.

'Soft Drug' Users Get Fines—Turner

HAMILTON (CP) — Justice Minister John Turner says fines, not jail sentences, have become the method of punishing close to 100 per cent of those convicted for possession of marijuana or hashish.

"We don't want to send a generation to jail and we're not going to," he said in an interview elaborating on a speech made last week at the opening of the fall term of the Ontario Supreme Court.

"In our current practice we are going by way of summary conviction for simple possession of marijuana and hashish and I'd say that close to 100 per cent don't involve jail terms.

"And if there is a summary conviction, then under the new Criminal Records Act the individual can apply in two years' time to have the record wiped out."

The act provides for making application to the solicitor-general for a pardon, granted to everyone who has generally behaved himself since the conviction.

The act applies to federal law violations. Those convicted in a summary proceeding can apply in two years and those found guilty of indictable crimes have to wait five years.

Severity of sentence is the main difference betwen summary conviction and indictable offences. The maximum penalty in a summary proceeding is almost always six months in jail and a $500 fine.

The Narcotics Control Act was relaxed a year ago to permit the summary prosecution of drug users, but not traffickers.

"I have an open mind on the whole question of drugs" the justice minister said.

"We need answers — a lot of answers. We have to define the rightful limit of the criminal sanction and ask ourselves, is the current law an excessive use of the criminal sanction? Does widespread knowledge that a law can be violated with impunity lead to disrespect for law generally?

"Should marijuana be left to personal option or are the consequences too dangerous for society generally? We desperately need public education and legitimate research unhampered by law."

LET'S ALL DO THE SCHOOL-YARD HOP

It could become a new game. These four fair students of Sir James Douglas School found hopping and bouncing a fine way to pass the time before the school bell rang. Moolah Stranded by Law On New Jersey's Shore

By WILLIAM GILDEA

WASHINGTON (WP) — Women's lib, a well-known influence in horse racing, tennis and golf, has yet to apply its first hammer lock on professional wrestling. The women of this sport — Fabulous Moolah, Toni Rose, Princess Little Cloud, The Mountain Girl — are paid well and, except for bruises and occasional broken bones, are generally happy.

A novice can earn 20,000 dollars a year and the champion, Moolah, "hasn't made less than 50,000 dollars in the last 10 years," according to wrestling impresario Vince McMahon. None wants to wrestle Haystack Calhoun.

There is a long-standing grievance, however, that women wrestlers want rectified. They are prevented by law from working in the state of New York. Understandably, they want a share of the wealth at Madison Square Garden, which has been sold out three times this summer for wrestling shows, including the record crowd for the building of more than 20,000.

Women wrestlers are liberated in 45 of the 50 states, but they may have to march on Albany to make it inside the Garden.

"We're treated like ladies in this business," Moolah said the other day. "But we want to wrestle in New York. And we'd like to be placed a little higher up on the cards, like the semi-final instead of the third bout."

Fabulous Moolah, 5-foot-6, 160 pounds, formerly Slave Girl Moolah, alias Lilian Smith, was recuperating at her Columbia, S.C., home after getting caught in a cobra twist and having leg muscles torn recently in Portland, Main.

"Right after that she was supposed to be in a championship match in Asbury Park," said Willie Gilzenberg, head of something called the World Wide Wrestling Federation. "She made it there anyway, just to put in an appearance. She's a trouper."

But a match in New York is more appealing to Moolah than a day at the Jersey shore.

"I don't understand that law," she said. "We wrestle right up to New York, in Paterson and Newark. The only thing between us is a river. We even go into New York on TV. The people are eager to see us.

"Why the law? It's not the idea that we don't wear enough clothes, we're covered more than most entertainers. They have topless entertainers, and no lady wrestler would ever do that.

"They even have the roller derby. That's much rougher than wrestling. They have women cab drivers, jockeys, even truck drivers. Wrestling is a sport just like golf and tennis. It's unfair to us."

If Moolah eventually makes it to New York, she will have come a long way. Her association with wrestling began when she was 9 years old and accompanied her father to matches in small, southern towns.

Portrait Applauded, Panned

LONDON (UPI) — Princess Anne's first official portrait, painted while she listened to pop music in Buckingham Palace, appeared Tuesday in British newspapers. Comment was mixed.

"I think it makes her look like the girl who became a wallflower at her own coming-out party," wrote Daily Mail art reporter Richard Lay.

"This is the Princess Anne many of her admirers want to see . . . mischievous and full of fun," the Daily Mirror said.

The portrait of Queen Elizabeth's 20-year-old daughter was painted by Bernard Hailstone, one of Britain's leading portrait artists.

It shows the princess standing demurely in a lemon yellow evening dress. Her hair tumbles over her shoulders and is crowned with a tiara.

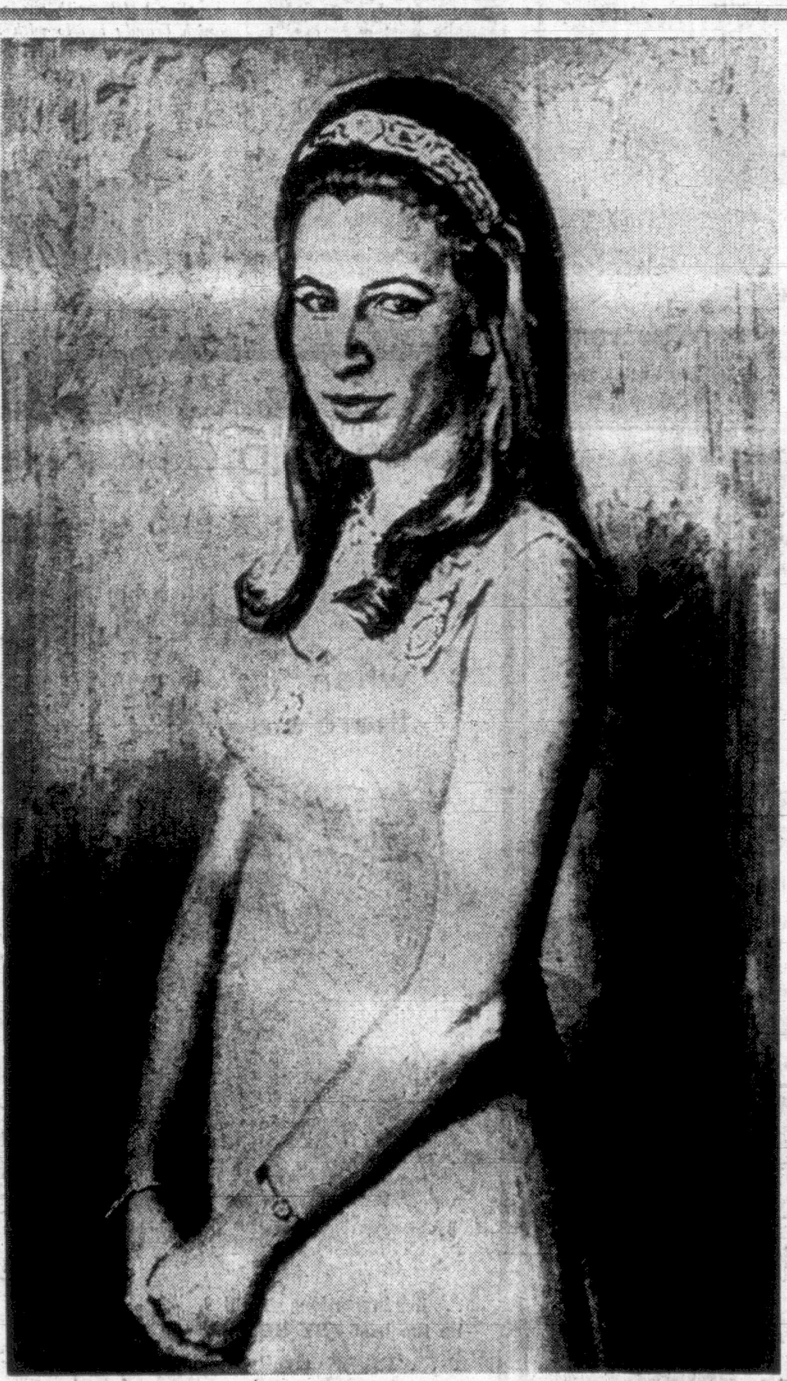
Hailstone said he had six sittings with Anne, who often played pop and folk music on a portable tape recorder in the palaces yellow drawing room while she posed.

"She has a very difficult face," Hailstone said. "Usually I can see a likeness after one or two sittings. But it was after 12 hours of painting that I felt I was getting somewhere near."

He said, "I hope I have given her an impish expression."

Said the Daily Mirror, "her dress and jewelry may be formal, but her smile is a girl who loves having fun — and knows how to enjoy herself."

The portrait goes on public view today.



Mixed comments greeted the first official portrait of Princess Anne, above, when it was released to the British public Tuesday. It was painted by Bernard Hailstone. (AP Wirephoto.)

WI Members In Training At Colwood

The South Vancouver Island district of the Women's Institutes will present a demonstration of painting and drawing in different media Thursday at its training school being held at the Colwood Women's Institute hall.

Mrs. D. G. White will give the demonstration during workshop hours, 10 a.m. to 12 noon, and 1:30 to 3:30 p.m.

The training school, which began Monday, will end Friday with workshops on public speaking by Mrs. J. J. Wiart of the Toastmistress club; and weight-watching on a balanced diet by Mrs. T. R. Scrace, home economist.

Today the women toured the B.C. Forest Products and the Provincial Museum with a lunch stop in Beacon Hill Park.

Workshops have been given in smocking, crocheting, rug making and liquid embroidery.

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I would like to comment about the middle-aged widower who had arranged for a "cute young doll" to come to his hotel room for some "pleasure—C.O.D."

The doll turned out to be the daughter of a friend of his. He said she held a secretarial job and he had always thought she was a lovely young lady. He said as soon as he opened the door and recognized her, he called it off by saying there had been some "mistake."

Now he wonders how she can face him when he goes to visit her parents?

I would like to ask him how he can face her? What makes him think that he is blameless? Wasn't it a two-sided proposition? What's good for the goose is good for the gander. — Gander And Goose

DEAR G AND G: The young doll was obviously new in the oldest profession. It's hard to say which one has more cause to be humiliated—the buyer or the seller. I suspect if this gander and goose never see each other again it will be ducky for both of them.

DEAR ABBY: I have a friend who is a great talker. The minute she appears she starts talking and goes on and on without hardly coming up for air. No exaggeration, last Sunday we went for a drive and she talked for six hours straight! All I said was "Uh ha," and "Is that so?"

How does one handle such a situation? Otherwise she is a very charming person. Thank you. — No Name, Please

DEAR NO NAME: How can a nonstop talker be "charming"? And when? If you can explain that to me I will tell you how to "handle" the situation.

DEAR ABBY: The people down the block have a beautiful collie dog, and she is a mess. I walk by their house on my way to work every morning and this beautiful friendly dog walks about a block with me and it just pains me to see how dirty and neglected she looks. Her rump is all matted and she scratches herself a lot. She must be terribly uncomfortable. I know she hasn't had a bath or been brushed since I moved into the neighborhood nearly a year ago.

I would tell her owner to take her to the vet and get her cleaned and groomed, but I'm afraid they would think I was butting into their business. I wouldn't even mind paying the $12 myself, although the dog's owners live in a grand house and I know they could well afford it.

Please tell me what to do before I kidnap that lovely dog and take her to the vet, then I'll have to write to you from jail. — Dog Lover

DEAR LOVER: I don't recommend kidnapping, even though your motives are humane. Get acquainted with the collie's owners. (It's easy. Dog owners are always receptive to strangers who show an interest in their dogs.) Then gently lower the boom.

DEAR ABBY: I am a widow, attempting to run an eight-cabin motel, pay off the mortgage, taxes, insurance, and food and living costs from its income. I have no hired help and must do most the repairs myself, even crawling on the roof with tar sealer searching for those elusive leaks.

I must keep my rates low to compete with the luxury credit card trade.

My problem is that so many "guests" decide to carry away my property that I am being driven out of business. Will you help me, Abby, and print the following for travellers:

"I don't mind your using my towels to wipe off your windshild — but please leave the towel — don't toss it into your car. Or if you use my wash cloths to wipe off your kids' hands and faces en route, please leave a quarter to replace the cloth because that's what it costs me. And when you accidentally carry off a key drop it into any mailbox. I'll gladly pay for its return. It's a lot cheaper than having new keys made.

"And as for you gals who take coffee pots, dishes, silver and pillows — have a heart! I'm sure you have much better at home.

"I don't want to start charging deposits against the return of such items, neither do I want to turn your licence number into the motel black list.

"After you've gone and I go to clean your cabin and check my pilferage loss it makes me sick to realize that I've actually lost money on you. I work so hard. Think about it next time, will you?" — Selina in Lesburg, Fla.

Modern Washer Needs to Be Versatile

OTTAWA (CP) — A washing machine has to be versatile to handle the many fibres, treatments and constructions used in today's washable garments, says a buying guide on washers in The Canadian Consumer.

The magazine, published by the Consumers Association of Canada, says automatic washers account for half the total sales of washing machines in Canada, although wringer washers are still widely used, especially in rural areas which have a water shortage or no plumbing facilities.

The third type of machine, the washer-spin-dryer, is also gaining popularity in rural homes. It consists of one tub with the washer on one side and the spin-dryer adjacent. Rinsing is done by lifting the clothes from the washing tub into the spinner and pouring water through them.

Prices of automatic washers vary greatly and the consumer should budget for charges to install necessary plumbing and a three-prong outlet.

WISE TO BUDGET

Manufacturers claim capacities ranging from eight to 18 pounds, depending upon weight and bulk of the clothes. All automatic washers have lint filters, but not all of these are self-cleaning.

Special features on some models include dispensers for bleach, fabric softeners and rinse conditioners. It is wise to consider the cost of such extras against your budget.

The article says the lowest-priced automatics are for families with few wash-and-wear or synthetic fabrics. The usual controls on such a machine are only a water temperature selector and a starter.

The medium-priced automatics usually have three wash-water temperatures and two agitator and spin speeds.

De luxe models have a single selection for the proper cycle for the type of fabric and load to be washed. These "programmed" washers lack flexibility for special washing needs, but some machines are partially programmed and permit more washing flexibility.

CONTROL IMPORTANT

One of the most important points to look for in a wringer washer is the emergency release that loosens wringer pressure. It should be easy to reach from wherever you are standing while doing the laundry and should react to the slightest pressure.

Controls should be easy to reach and operate and control of pressure on the rollers is an important feature.

A good test in the store is to swing the wringer to all positions and see whether the washer tends to fall over with the weight of the action. If it does, try another line that has better balance.

Also watch for: a motor switch that controls the action; gravity draining or pump-driven draining; casters if necessary; smooth and rounded edges everywhere, and a plainly marked water line.

The spinner in the third type of machine, the washer-spin-dryer, whirls at high speed to extract water from one load while another is being washed. The water goes back into the washer or is drained. In most models, the spinner can be used for rinsing.

The water supply comes from an ordinary tap which should have a threaded fitting to take the washer hose.

These machines are usually more expensive than the wringer machines and they take up more space.

The article also says that the guarantee or warranty that comes with a washer should be for at least a year, and more for transmission parts. Ask about the guarantee on the whole equipment and on parts. Make sure there is a service centre available to you for the particular molel you buy.

By EUNICE FARMER

Dear Eunice Farmer,

I have been using a size 12 pattern, but now it seems to be too small in the bust and shoulder area. I haven't changed in weight so am at a loss as to what has happened. I did write to the pattern company and they said they are substantially reducing the ease allowance in the bust and shoulder area and have increased the waist and hip allowance. I am about ready to try to learn to design my own clothes since the patterns are so little help.

Mrs. W. A.

Dear Mrs. W. A.:

From your measurements, it seems to me that a size 14 would fit you much better in all areas. I think it is wise to carefully check the construction or style lines of a dress and then choose which of the two sizes would fit best for that particular pattern.

In recent years, the desginers have created garments that fit much closer to the body and the bustline was greatly reduced. In fact, the first clue to this type of garment would be the amount of bustline darting. Some patterns actually eliminated any sign of a bust dart. You would naturally need more ease in this type of dress and perhaps would be better off in a larger size.

On the other hand with the return of the shirt type dress, which means much more looseness in the bodice area, you might be able to comfortably wear the smaller size pattern. This really isn't such a big, huge problem if you will just spend a little time trying to understand the amound of ease the designer intended for that particular gament.

WOMAN LEADS QUEBEC LIBERALS

Lise Bacon cried out with delight when she became the first woman to lead the 100,000-member Quebec Liberal party during its three-day convention at the weekend. Her election was hardly a surprise, however, as the 35-year-old office manager from Trois-Rivieres ran unopposed for the post. She has been active in politics for 20 years. (CP Wirephoto.)

No Easy Solution to Package Pollution

TORONTO (CP) — There is sometimes more to a package than meets the eye, says Lyn Jamison. That's one of the reasons the packaging industry has not yet developed non-polluting, disintegrating plastics and glass.

Jamison, executive vice-president of the Packaging Association of Canada, says most packaging research is done in the United States, and that researchers have been working on the problem of producing glass and plastic containers that will disappear harmlessly without further fouling the environment.

There are a number of problems. There must be no harmful vapor or residue and the container must be made stable enough, perhaps with a coating, so that it does not disintegrate before its contents are used.

In addition, there are the problems involved in any kind of packaging. Will contents and container combine to produce an unwanted reaction? What do light and air do to container and product?

As an illustration, he explains that there is a coating on the film bags for most cookies. Without the coating, ultra-violet rays would bleach and bake the cookies in the package.

Soda crackers are expensively wrapped in sealed wax paper inside the box because they are stored in the most humid place in the house, in a kitchen cupboard, and they would get soft if they weren't double protected.

Jamison maintains that the search for a non-polluting, dissolving package will go on, but he says none of the research efforts to date has provided a completely practical set of answers to all the questions.

'Little Guy' Gets a Helping Hand

MONTREAL (CP) — Anne Dawson, constituency assistant to Quebec's new lands and forests minister, says an important part of her job is keeping in touch with "the little man who is struggling to survive on a pinched income."

The 28-year-old graduate of McGill and Dalhousie universities says "these people have a lot of pertinent things to say and if the party system is to survive, these are the people who must become involved."

Miss Dawson disclaims Westmount riding's reputation in Montreal as a bastion of English-Canadian wealth and power.

"It is a mistake to confuse the riding with the city since the riding includes 50,000 people and very few of those are earning $100,000 a year or living on the hill in Westmount."

She worries about "the little guys who usually get shifted from department to department when they try to call a government office."

HAVE NEW ATTITUDE

She was establishing a community creation program in another part of the city when she met the sister-in-law of Kevin Drummond, Liberal member of the national assembly for Westmount.

"When Mr. Drummond was looking for a person with experience in community work to act as his constituency assistant, his sister-in-law suggested me.

"The position . . . isn't new but we believe our attitude towards it is. My primary function in this multi-faceted job will be to act as a channel of information for Mr. Drummond in order to give him an idea of the tempo of the riding."

Besides visiting church and youth groups and citizens' clubs, Miss Dawson expects to learn riding needs via the grapevine.

BRIDGES THE GAP

"The phone started ringing as soon as I started the job. Most of the calls have been from people on welfare and from old people on pensions. So many of these have been frustrated by government switchboards that I say let's start again from square one."

She hops into her car for visits to pensioners who can't afford to take the bus to her office. It usually surprises them but "my garage is paid by the government as is my mileage so why shouldn't I make myself available to them?"

Miss Dawson feels most people have difficulty in making their ideas known to elected representatives.

In the past there has been a tendency for politicians to almost disappear once elected. I think my function is to bridge the gap between the people and Mr. Drummond.

"One of the things I like best about this job is that it isn't political. I am being paid by the government but I don't push a political philosophy. I am working with people. Many are trying to find an answer to the urban malaise and this is one approach."

VON Hires Second Male Nurse

The Victorian Order of Nurses in Victoria has added a second male nurse to its staff, it was announced at the recent monthly meeting.

James Spencer, a graduate of Royal Alexandra Hospital, Edmonton, has post-graduate study in psychiatry and rehabilitation.

Senior nurse Betty Short said the need for another male nurse followed an increase in requests for that type of service. The first male was hired seven years ago.

Miss Short said, in a report on summer activities, that an average of 2,175 visits were made each month with 105 patients admitted to VON service.

TORONTO (CP) — Yorkville Avenue isn't what it used to be. Gone are the days of the "flower children" and left behind are the commonly classified "hippies."

Each day — business as usual — drugs are sold openly with swarms of young people drifting up and down past the dwindling coffee-houses.

"The real Village core has long since gone," says one observer of five years. "They can't stand the teenyboppers."

Along with the departure of the Villagers, who first put Yorkville on the city tour maps as the counterpart of New York's Greenwich Village, went the character of much of its business.

It has become a centre of commercialized come-ons.

DISAPPOINTMENT

Yorkville has presented a greater disappointment to United States visitors.

As one young man from Indiana said bluntly: "This is a bummer. I didn't expect this. People told me: 'Go to Toronto. That's where it's at.' But man, they were wrong. The people here are all screwed up."

One older visitor from Detroit did note, however, that Toronto's hippies are "cleaner" than in her city.

Another youthful visitor from Cincinnati said he "couldn't wait to get out of Toronto."

Just before, the same young man had been moving along the line of lazing longhairs, trying to sell tabs of "acid" he was displaying.

NAMES CHANGE WEEKLY

"The only people you're going to sell it to are chicks about 15," advised one potential customer. "They're the only ones who'll buy it."

Metro Constable Ross Praskey, one of the two community service officers assigned to the Yorkville patrol area, says of the village's "plastic" population:

"They all profess to know everything about drugs, and they don't know a thing. They're marks. The 'weekend hippies' and the pushers can size each other up immediately. Those kids are being offered anything and the names change every week."

The Yorkville regulars consider pushing in the street an "un-cool" practice. Such dealers prey on the combination of ignorance and eagerness the part-time Villagers bring with them from the suburbs.

"When a kid gets down to shooting speed—actually stabbing himself continuously—that's a significant turning point," states Constable Praskey. "Then I consider him a true social casualty."

Canada-China Talks 'Unresolved'

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said today the Canada-China recognition talks "are not concluded yet and we don't know how they will end up."

The Liberal leader's comment on his government's longstanding attempt to extend diplomatic recognition to Mainland China came during an appearance on the NBC-TV show Today.

On the same subject, Mr. Trudeau also told show host Hugh Downs "we still feel we are making progress" at the Stockholm recognition talks which began in February of last year.

A transcript of Mr. Trudeau's remarks was released following a taping session Tuesday night for today's broadcast from the capital. The American show is emanating this week from Canadian cities.

He also said that despite the halving of Canada's NATO troop commitment, "we're not withdrawing from world events in any sense."

Canada is trying to give its international involvement more meaning.

"What we have saved in our NATO expenditures, we are trying to re-allocate in a more meaningful way."

WOULD ABOLISH CAUSES

Dealing with the Quebec secessionist movement, he said his government's solution "is to try to make sure that the causes of separatism are done away with, and if they (the government methods) are successful, then separatism will disappear. If they are not, it will prosper."

He said nationalist movements of this type are generally caused by insufficiencies of previous regimes and governments or constitutions that do not sufficiently respect the values the nationalistic group holds precious.

Asked about any insights he might have in the life-style of modern youth, Mr. Trudeau said that when such a group identifies with itself and rejects other groups, it means there is something wrong with a society that has not been able to give everybody his place.

As a result, groups such as modern youth become afraid of losing their particular identity and try to defend it.

"If you can give them hope that the values in which they believe as young people will be respected in the society, then they will be willing to participate in the society."

Past development, however, has not been in that direction. As a result, youth complains that the mechanized society that has developed is interested only in producing more things, not better things.

"And what we try to do for them is to make governments relevant and to make them honest," he said. "I think this is what they ask for, and this we try to do."

THE GALLUP POLL

Survey Shows Many Unhappy With Kierans

BY THE CANADIAN INSTITUTE OF PUBLIC OPINION

(World Copyright Reserved)

Hon. Eric Kierans has not won plaudits from the Canadian people in his role as Postmaster-General. More than four-in-ten citizens rate the job being done by him as disappointing. Compared to his level, Justice Minister John Turner and Energies Minister J. J. Greene are named as doing a disappointing job by only about one-in-ten for each.

Ratings for each minister as excellent or fair, reveal Mr. Turner at the top with 58%; Mr. Greene with 48% and Mr. Kierans at 42%.

Reason for Mr. Kieran's high ratio of "disappointing" verdicts has, probably, much to do with his difficult responsibilities in the long drawn-out postal strikes. He has been much more in the spotlight than either Mr. Turner, or Mr. Greene. The result is that only 16% of the public are undecided as to what kind of a job he is doing, compared to 32% undecided about Mr. Turner, and 43% about Mr. Greene.

Gallup Poll interviewers put this question in turn for each of the three ministers:

"HOW WOULD YOU RATE THE JOB BEING DONE BY ERIC KIERANS, POSTMASTER-GENERAL (MINISTER OF COMMUNICATIONS)—EXCELLENT, FAIR, OR DISAPPOINTING?"

The same question was asked for John Turner, Minister of Justice, and J. J. Greene, Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources.

As shown below, a check on the regional point of view, shows that Mr. Kierans is faulted to a greater degree in Quebec than elsewhere, while the West is more critical of Mr. Turner and Mr. Greene than the East.

Pulp Firms Reject McGeer Mediation Bid

VANCOUVER (CP) — Provincial Liberal leader Dr. Pat McGeer has offered to mediate in the seven-week strike by the Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada against eight B.C. pulp mills, but an industry spokesman says there's nothing to mediate.

Fred Mullen, PPWC national president, disclosed McGeer's offer Tuesday night, saying the Liberal leader was "presently attempting to get talks resumed" between the union and the Industrial Relations Bureau, sole bargaining agent for the industry.

Bureau president Donald Lanskail, told of Dr. McGeer's offer, said, "I don't know what there is to mediate at the present time. We've indicated our position quite clearly.

"There's no room to move on the term of agreement or on the wage structure," he said.

Mr. Lanskail said Dr. McGeer had not spoken to him about the matter.

The PPWC's 4,000 B.C. members voted 66.9 per cent over-all to reject a three-year contract providing a 22.5 per cent wage increase.

The same package was accepted by two international unions representing 7,000 pulp workers in the province.

Mr. Mullin said one of the faults his union found with the package was its lack of a clause covering inflation or a rise in the cost of living.

The union planned to resume negotiations on "local issues" today with the Tahsis Co. at Gold River on Vancouver Island.

Mothers Demonstrate

TORONTO (CP) — Three women were charged with causing a distrubance after police broke up a demonstration at an intersection where mothers blocked traffic to protest a lack of a crossing guard for their children. The mothers won a temporary victory when police stationed a crossing guard in the morning. But they returned to the intersection after no guard appeared in the afternoon.

ALBERT'S SECRET COMES OUT IN WASH

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Albert Langanella, 35, began the day with a stop at the laundromat. He ended it in jail after authorities took a look at his "wash."

Langanella left a bulging pillowcase in a coin-operated drying machine and headed for a nearby tavern. The landromat owners removed the pillowcase when the dryer finished.

Tied shut with a black thread, the pillowcase contained $100,000 in counterfeit $10 bills police said.

Authorities explained a time-honored counterfeit trick is to launder newly printed money to make it look older.

Langanella, arrested when he returned from the tavern, told police he found the pillowcase on the street.

SPIRO'S SONG NOT A HIT

NEW YORK (AP) — Rock music spokesmen reject both the tune and the lyrics of Vice-President Spiro Agnew's claim that some songwriters and filmmakers encourage drug use. They say he's too far out of it to dig the difference.

In a speech to Republicans in Las Vegas, Nev., Monday night, Agnew said American youths were being "brainwashed" into a "drug culture" by rock music, books, films and underground newspapers. He added that many rock songs present the use of drugs in "such an attractive light, that for the impressionable turning on becomes the natural and even the approved thing to do."

Some rock 'n' roll authorities said some of the song titles Agnew referred to were either ancient history to today's young people or not necessarily about drugs.

TINA HOPEFUL

Baby on the Way

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "I've had good experiences and bad experiences all my life, plenty of both. But this one is going to be good—I'm convinced of that."

Tina Louise, the shapely redhead who has epitomized sex in films (Li'l Abner) and television Gilligan's Island, was reflecting about her unusual situation: She is expecting her first child, and recently filed for divorce from television personality Les Crane.

"Of course it's not easy," she remarked at the Hidden Valley home where she lives alone. "There are times when I become overwhelmingly lonely. But I've entered a new phase: the baby is kicking now. That becomes a reminder that it will all be worth it."

Miss Louise has always been a frank and open talker, but she was strangely silent about the details, of her parting with Crane.

She feels that under the relaxed California law, she probably would hve qualified for an abortion. She declined to have one.

WORTHWHILE RISK

"I was told that due to my own physiological condition, I might not be able to have another baby if I submitted to an abortion," she said. "I wasn't willing to risk that. I had been waiting too many years to have a child of my own."

Her single state, Miss Louise believes, will be temporary.

"It's not as though I rushed fcom one marriage to another," she said. "I waited a long time before I married, and Les and I were together for five years.

"I believe in marriage, and I feel sure that another man will come along who will want to marry me. Then the baby will be lucky enough to have two fathers."

"I believe in women's liberation," said the actress. "I've been liberated most of my life. I can sympathize with those women who believe that they shouldn't be tied down to taking care of children, that facilities should be available to watch over their children while they work.

"I intend to go on working, and I would leave my baby with paid help or in someone else's care. But not overnight."

ZONING RAPPED

GANGES — Numerous objections were made at a public hearing Monday night on the first zoning bylaw for Salt Spring Island.

More than 30 briefs were presented at the meeting under the chairmanship of M. H. Holmes, the island's director on the Capital Regional District board.

The board has given initial readings to the new bylaw and will consider final approval later this month.

Transport Union Vote Labor Turning Point?

By IAN PORTER

QUEBEC (CP) — One of Canada's oldest national unions and Canadian labor in general may well be at a decisive turning point when convention delegates at the Chateau Frontenac Hotel vote Thursday to select a new leader.

In terms of size, the 33,000-member Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers is only No. 12 in Canada. Among the unions which are governed entirely within the country, however, it is third only to the Canadian Union of Public Employees, with 140,000 members, and the federal-level Public Service Alliance of Canada with a membership of 125,000.

The issues before the 400 delegates this week include whether the CBRT can survive as an independent union and if it can provide leadership for an increasingly nationalistic Canadian work force.

Both questions mirror problems in the rest of Canadian society. The CBRT's base of 21,000 railway workers—most of them clerks, freight handlers and sleeping, dining and parlor car employees of the CNR — is gradually dwindling as a result of technological and operational change. The union reached a peak of 38,000 members in 1955.

Meanwhile, avenues for expansion are strictly limited with most of the biggest labor jurisdictions assigned by the Canadian Labor Congress to branches of U.S.-based international unions.

HAS PRESTIGE

Still, the CBRT has both national prestige and, perhaps more important, a thumb-and-forefinger grasp on a main artery of the Canadian economy —jurisdiction over some 1,200 employees of the St. Lawrence Seaway Authority.

It also has the fierce determination of its membership to remain independent. A special convention last year voted 305 to 61 to reject the proposal of the national executive to merge with the International Brotherhood of Railway, Steamship and Airline Clerks which represents a parallel class of CP Rail employees.

The basic decision made in 1969, the convention delegates now have to choose between the author of the merger proposal, national secretary-treasurer Donald Secord, 59, and a relative outsider, Richard Greaves, business agent for the CBRT Seaway local on the Welland Canal.

Mr. Secord was praised as a sound manager Monday in the address to the delegates of outgoing president William Smith. In an interview later, Mr. Secord admitted the merger proposal had been badly handled but he was confident his record of full-time service to the union since 1948 would bring him victory.

The future of CBRT, he suggested, lies in a program of reaching but to organize small groups of workers in the emerging service industries combined with a careful husbanding of resources.

Mr. Greaves offers a promise of greater militancy and a more prominent role for the union.

PROPOSES COALITION

He proposes a "national transportation coalition" of rail, marine, highway and seaway workers to be strong enough to practically dictate conditions throughout the country.

Mr. Secord has suggested the proposal is "misleading" and other sceptics have used the world "utopian".

"We might as well go back to the Wobblies of 1919," said one delegate, referring to the ill fated efforts to bring all industrial workers under one roof.

Mr. Greaves, however, is no newcomer to the labor movement. In 1956, he led the National Association of Marine Engineers into a brief association with the Seafarers International Union, at that time under Hal Banks. Three years later he had broken ties with the SIU and the Engineers merged with the CBRT.

Of his association with the now-fugitive Banks, Mr. Greaves freely admits he shared a belief in the need for united action by labor but he says he learned the hard way that "if you go into a cannibal's house you're likely to end up on the table."

Mr. Greaves insists that the coalition of transportation workers is an obtainable objective and that it would no more than parallel the development of the main employers. The present CBRT leadership, he claims, lacks both the imagination and the sensitivity for the job. Mr. Secord he dismisses as "a competent banker".

Chemical Makers Plan Self-Policing

By JIM NEAVES

JASPER, Alta. (CP) — The Canadian Agricultural Chemicals Association Tuesday moved to increase its flow of information to the public about pesticides and set up machinery to police the industry itself.

At the association's annual meeting, delegates representing 54 agricultural chemical manufacturing firms who produce 80 per cent of Canada's pesticides voted to implement plans for an information program to provide better liaison between the industry and the public.

Jacques Chevelier, CACA executive secretary, said the program probably would involve the addition of one full-time technical information officer in the association's Montreal office.

There was no official confirmation, but delegates said the program would require a 100-per-cent increase in the association's annual dues to member companies. An informed source said it is believed an outside agency will be hired to establish the program.

The association also drafted a code of ethics for pesticide producers and will establish a three-member ethics advisory committee.

EXPLAINS MOVE

Mr. Chevelier said the association wanted to create a climate of "do it yourself rather than being told to do it" by government in cases in which a product should be withdrawn from the market.

Association officials said the draft code of ethics for the industry has been completed and approved by the membership, but the measures require bylaw changes which would take two or three weeks to complete.

"We would have the machinery available if one of our members showed too much self-interest in his product and not the interest of the public and we, as an organization, would have something to say about it," Mr. Chevelier said.

"However, it is the sort of thing we never expect to have to use."

He said the measure could involve a voluntary withdrawal of a product from the market.

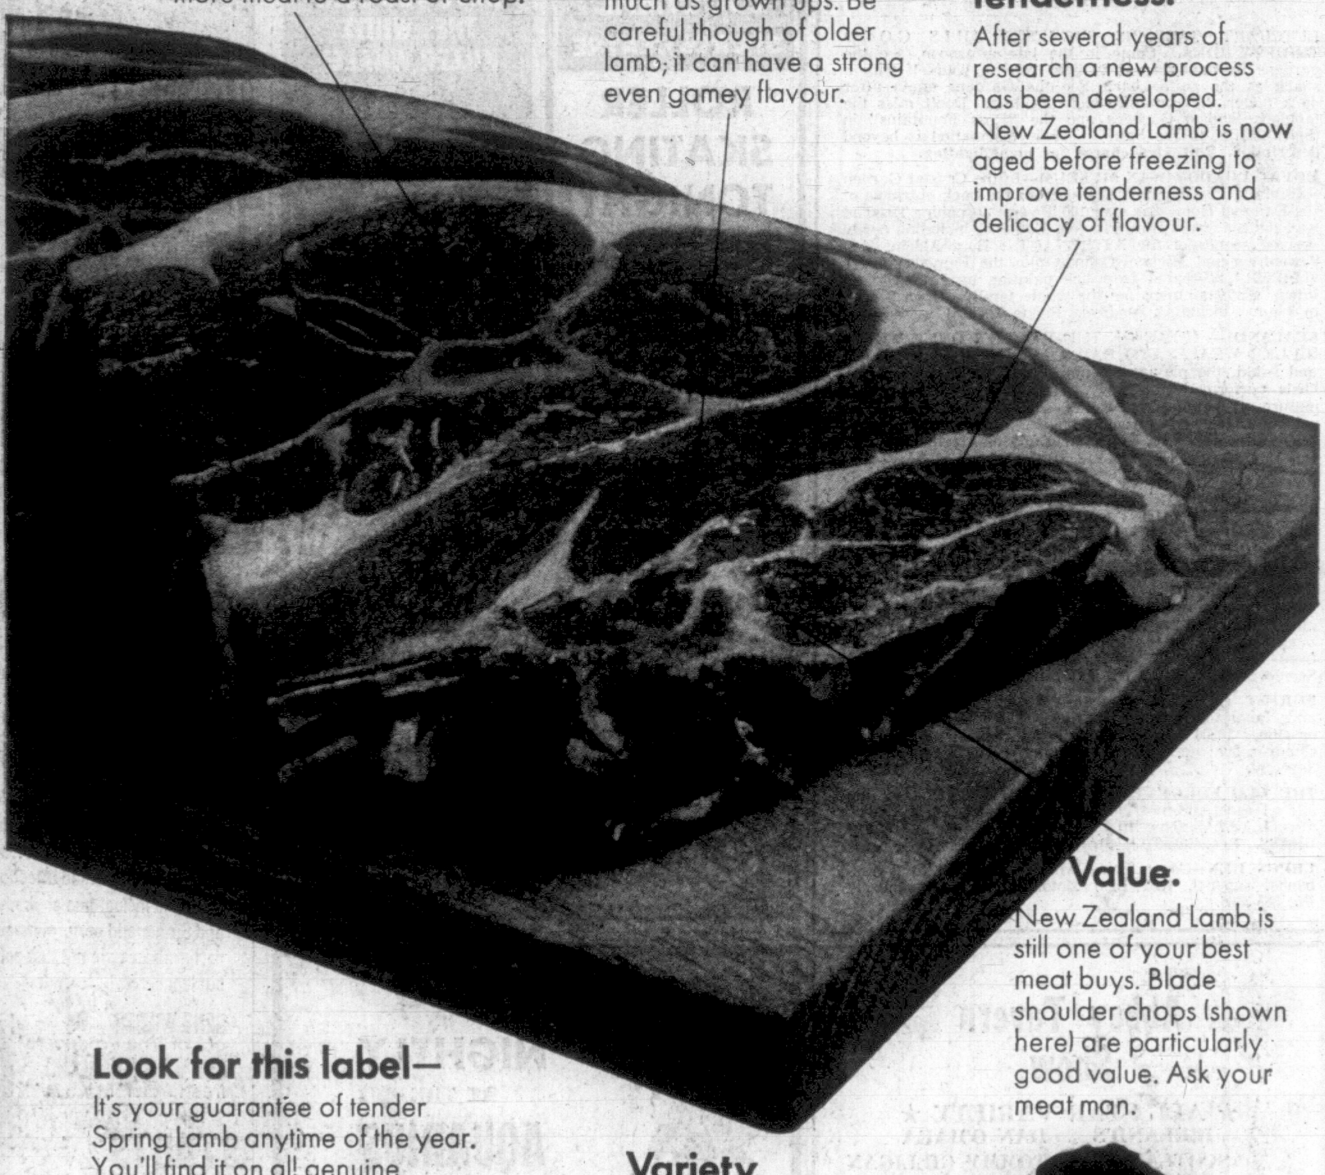
Why lamb is such a good meat buy.

What is Spring Lamb?
Spring Lamb is lamb born in the spring; it's naturally young, tender, succulent. Spring Lamb raised for meat (as New Zealand Lamb is) rather than for wool is rounder, fuller with more meat to a roast or chop.

Flavour.
Spring Lamb has a mild delicate flavour. One that children enjoy just as much as grown ups. Be careful though of older lamb; it can have a strong even gamey flavour.

Now. Aged for tenderness.
After several years of research a new process has been developed. New Zealand Lamb is now aged before freezing to improve tenderness and delicacy of flavour.



Value.
New Zealand Lamb is still one of your best meat buys. Blade shoulder chops (shown here) are particularly good value. Ask your meat man.

Look for this label—
It's your guarantee of tender Spring Lamb anytime of the year. You'll find it on all genuine New Zealand Spring Lamb.

LAMB SHOULDER CHOPS
Store in freezer; or thaw, unwrapped, in refrigerator. To cook when thawed: Broil, grill or pan-brown 6 to 9 mins. each side. To cook when frozen: Broil, grill or pan-brown 9 to 11 mins. each side.
NEW ZEALAND SPRING LAMB

Variety.
There are so many ways to prepare lamb. Turkish shishkebab, Irish stew, Pakistani curry, Polynesian Luau chops... Lamb is a round-the-world adventure in eating for your whole family. A feast you can enjoy often.

Young Cree Author New Messiah or Wild-Eyed Radical?

By DENNIS BELL

CARDINAL . . . unjust society

EDMONTON (CP) — Two Eskimo men sat aboard a sleek jetliner 32,000 feet above the Northwest Territories studying a tattered copy of Harold Cardinal's best-seller, The Unjust Society.

The Eskimos were en route to a conference at Coppermine, N.W.T., on the Arctic Ocean to discuss the thorny question of aboriginal rights. Though it was the first time either of them had flown in a jet, they were deeply immersed in the writings of Mr. Cardinal, a 25-year-old Cree Indian from Alberta's Sucker Creek reserve.

They shared the book, underlining words with calloused fingers and translating phrases into Eskimo from English for each other. Even in the frozen tundra, Harold Cardinal's ideas on native rights have found fertile soil.

"I waited four months for the book to arrive by mail and this is the third time I have read it," said one of the Eskimos. "Mr. Cardinal puts into words all that I have been thinking but unable to say. He writes the way the Eskimo people feel."

The man who generates this kind of response is the chubby-cheeked president of the Indian Association of Alberta, which represents 27,000 treaty Indians in this province.

FOUGHT WHITE PAPER

He has been damned as a wild-eyed radical and praised as a new messiah by both whites and Indians. Mr. Cardinal dislikes both characterizations and insists he's neither.

However, in three hectic years as head of the most vocal Indian organization in Canada, the man with the horn-rimmed glasses and buckskin jacket has:

- Led the fight that scuttled Indian Affairs Minister Jean Chretien's controversial white paper on the native population issued in June, 1969;
- Written a book that, with 30,000 copies already sold, is required reading for anyone, white or red, who wants to understand the viewpoint of many of Canada's 250,000 treaty Indians;
- Emerged as the most articulate spokesman for Indian grievances in Western Canada and one of the harshest critics of the Indians affairs department and its minister.

Mr. Cardinal speaks in slow, deliberate phrases and rarely smiles. He is outwardly cold and extremely serious about his work, his people and their problems.

LISTS GRIEVANCES

"The Unjust Society was primarily an attempt to provide some background information for the Canadian people, the type that hasn't been available to them in the past," he said.

"I felt it was important that a catalogue of Indian grievances be placed before the public so that if one day these frustrations reach a point where Indian militants are throwing bombs into white houses, the whites won't be able to say 'I didn't know about it'."

He conceded there is some validity in criticisms of the book for its negative emphasis and lack of solutions, and said he hopes to start work on another one shortly.

"I want to write about our movement. Someone has to try and explain it in terms that white people will understand. In essence the next book will describe a positive process that is taking place rather than just cataloguing our grievances."

Born in High Prairie, Alta., Mr. Cardinal was raised on the Sucker Creek reserve and got his early schooling in the traditional Indian residential school. He went on to high school in Edmonton, then took two years of sociology at St. Patrick's College in Ottawa.

HEADED INDIAN BODY

Involved in native organizations since the age of 14, Mr. Cardinal was elected president of the Canadian Indian Youth Council and returned to Edmonton in May, 1968, to take what he thought would be a summer job with the newly-formed Alberta Native Communications Society.

That drew him into the mushrooming Alberta Indian rights movement. A month after he arrived, Mr. Cardinal found himself elected president of the Alberta Indian Association, with its accompanying membership on the board of the National Indian Brotherhood of which he now is a major force.

After hectic months of getting the association on its financial feet—with a great deal of government help—Mr. Cardinal led the Alberta Indians on their first sally against Ottawa.

On June 25, 1969, Mr. Chretien issued his long-awaited policy statement, which advocated abolition of his department within five years, repealing the Indian Act and surrender of jurisdiction over Indians to the provinces.

Mr. Cardinal marshalled Western Canadian Indians for an all-out attack on the white paper, terming it a blueprint for cultural genocide. "When the white paper was announced I just got good and mad and wrote the book."

HIT MANY TARGETS

The book didn't stop at the white paper. It blasted the federal government at all levels, provincial education systems, the churches, welfare and even the Company of Young Canadians.

The Unjust Society, which went to press in late 1969 in a glare of publicity, exploded like a firecracker in the middle of the Liberal government's carefully nurtured "Just Society" imagery.

Leaders of the British Columbia, Saskatchewan, Manitoba, Yukon and Northwest Territories Indian organizations lined up solidly behind Mr. Cardinal as did Walter Dieter of Regina, president of the National Indian Brotherhood.

In early June the leaders trooped to Ottawa for another round of meetings with Mr. Chretien and Prime Minister Trudeau. They carried with them the "Red Paper," drawn up by the Alberta chiefs and Mr. Cardinal as an Indian response to the white paper.

The Red Paper spelled out in 100 carefully worded pages Indian demands for full government recognition of treaty rights as a prerequisite to any settlement of Indian grievances.

SEES MORAL VICTORY

It also included an impressive blueprint for co-ordinated government-native programs to attack reserve poverty, unemployment, education problems and economic development.

In replying to the Indian leaders Mr. Trudeau conceded that the white paper "may be naive, may be short-sighted or misguided," and promised that Ottawa won't try to ram anything down the Indians' throats.

"I think the Indian people have scored a moral victory if not a tactical one," said Mr. Cardinal. "But despite what we interpreted as the death blow administered by the prime minister, the department of Indian affairs is still implementing the policies outlined in the white paper.

"They're bringing it in through the back door every way they can think of."

Mr. Cardinal concedes that Ottawa "appears to be taking our Red Paper seriously" and that the months ahead should see establishment of "some sort of a consultative body mutually acceptable to the government and the various Indian organizations" that would start work on a binding solution.

Take Off Fat With Home Recipe Plan

It's simple how quickly one may lose pounds of unsightly fat right in your own home. Make this home recipe yourself. It's easy, no trouble at all and costs little. Just go to your drugstore and ask for Naran. Pour this into a pint bottle and add enough grapefruit juice to fill the bottle. Take two tablespoonsful twice a day as needed and follow the Naran Reducing Plan.

If your first purchase does not show you a simple easy way to lose bulky fat and help regain slender more graceful curves; if reducible pounds and inches of excess fat don't disappear from neck, chin, arms, abdomen, hips, calves and ankles just return the empty bottle for your money back. Follow this easy way endorsed by many who have tried this plan and help bring back alluring curves and graceful slenderness. Note how quickly bloat disappears—how much better you feel. More alive, youthful appearing and active.

Chapters in History Unearthed By Avid Collectors of Bottles

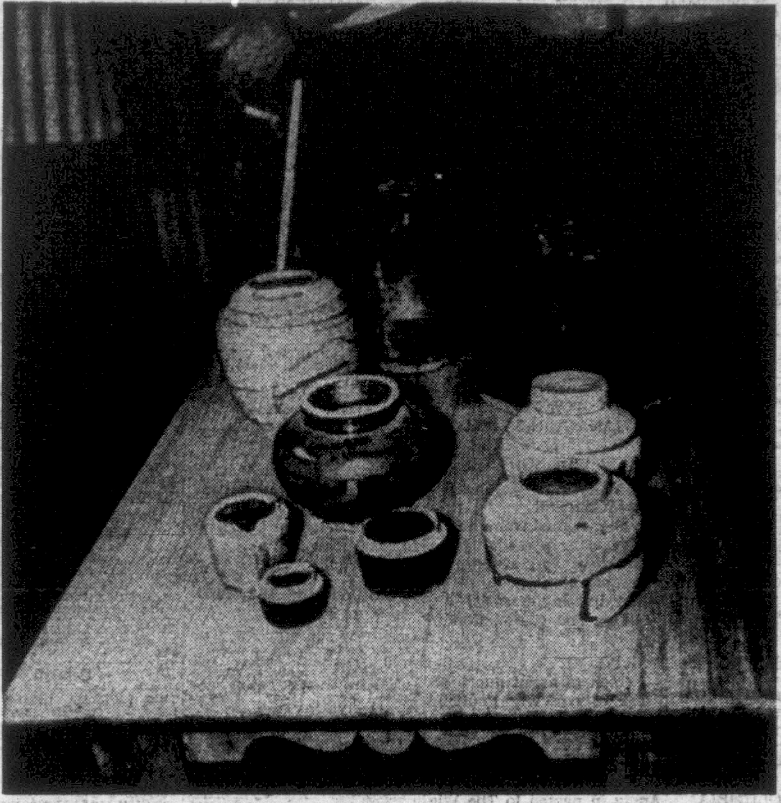
Forgotten Dumps His Target

By DOREEN HUNTER

Foraging in long-forgotten dumps at Sidney, Brentwood and Sooke, a retired naval chief petty officer, Rick Adlam of Sidney, has created a vivid, visual insight into the life of Vancouver Island pioneers.

Adlam is one of the persistent breed of artifact collectors who with no intention of selling, keep looking for artifacts they can cherish for their historic interest and beauty.

Armed with an oddly efficient little gadget he calls a "rusty-can sweeper" and a kit of digging tools, Adlam has amassed an impressive collection of Oriental, European, American and Canadian Bottles since he began his engrossing hobby in 1967.



POTTERY with a special significance for collector Rick Adlam includes this array, of Chinese origin. Tallest is a narrow-necked tiger whisky jar and largest is a soy sauce jug.

HISTORIC CHAPTERS

Among them are bottles that have contained condiments, liquor and medicine — each contributing its own chapter of island history.

Many of them have been found as the "sweeper," a portable detector that hums until it hovers over metal, to which it reacts with an abrupt silence or "null," has been used by Adlam on long-forgotten dumps.

He had unearthed dozens of Chinese pottery preserving jars, some with lids once secured with red sealing wax. Also in Adlam's collection are a dozen or so narrow-necked Tiger whisky pottery jars. A square brown jug, once used for soya sauce, still has its clay plug struck firmly in its spout.

CHINESE RELICS

Chinese settlers, who worked on Butchart's Gardens, in the fields, or operated primitive brick factories, must have contributed to Adlam's collection of tiny medicine bottles, one of which is still filled with hand-rolled red pills. Salve jars, made for single dose or application, round out their ranks.

All bring back the days when Sidney had a small thriving Chinatown of its own.

Even the lowly pop, or soda-water, bottle has a tale to tell.

Of local historical interest are four bottles which parallel the career of one C. Morley of Victoria.

First employed in the bottleworks of Thomas Shotbold in 1868, Morley later became part-owner with a man called Greenwood.

OLD TO NEW

Greenwood's name disappeared from the business directory by 1880 and by 1905 Morley was listed as a soda water manufacturer, producing 30,000 bottles a day and also bottling beer, wine, seltzer, lithia water and ginger ale.

The oldest pop bottle in the collection is crudely blown; the second is blown in a mold with an applied top while the third is blown in a two part mold with an applied screw-top. The latest has an applied top and an almost beer bottle shape.

Adlam says the "hottest" finds in the bottle-collecting field today are bitters bottles. He has quite a number. A beverage of high alcoholic content, bitters was usually consumed "for medicinal purposes." The Pure Food Act of 1906 put an end to that lucrative business.

One of Adlam's favorites is a tall, dark green, tapered bottle, described in "The Bottle Collector" by Azor Vienneau as a tapered Dutch gin or case bottle of the 1800s.

He's also fond of an old European hand-blown brandy bottle.

PURPLE PRIZES

Also popular are items made of "purple glass," the color being determined by the amount of manganese used by the manufacturer. Made between 1880 and 1914, these are prized by collectors.

Artifact-hunting requires much more than elbow-grease. Adlam said he's burned the midnight oil, reading up on local history and North American bottles.

Most "collectable" bottles originated in the period between 1840 and 1903. But there are exceptions.

Adlam's wife, Del, shares his enthusiasm for history-chasing but prefers her own sites—she does her collecting in antique stores.

Tonight's Top Television Shows

PRO FOOTBALL. 5 p.m., Channel 8. The Calgary Stampeders and the Hamilton Tiger Cats meet in the eastern city in regular CFL league action. Johnny Esaw, Bill Bewley and Dick Shatto report.

ODYSSEY. 7:30 p.m., Channel 2. Big Jasper Country looks at outdoor living in Alberta. Featured is a canoe trip through the northern part of the province.

THE STOREFRONT LAWYERS. 7:30 p.m., Channel 7 (Premiere) Impressive opening for the network's prestige series about lawyers. Robert Foxworth, an interesting actor, leads two young fighting aides in the defense of an elderly client, brought up on a murder charge after being evicted from his home. The attorney's target is an Establishment swindler (nicely played by Edward Andrews), a high-level businessman poaching on small fish through a web of interlocking loan, mortgage, and repair companies. Unraveling the facts in court becomes an engrossing process, and David Karp's script manages to compensate for the show's lack of mobility.

THE MEN FROM SHILOH. 7:30 p.m., Channel 5 (Premiere) "Colonel Mackenzie Versus the West." This is the successor to "The Virginian," sporting a new title, two new characters (only one is introduced in this episode), and a similar appeal to fans. Colonel Mackenzie (Stewart Granger) is the new owner of Shiloh and he's an Englishman, straight out of the Army, who arrives on the scene and is soon joined by his batman (not a caped crusader, but a high class type of orderly from Britain). Tonight, a couple of villainously inspired hangings are discovered and the colonel's handling of the situation convinces Trampas and the Virginian not to ride out into the sunset but to stay on for another season. Under any title, this series is frequently interesting, and it's right on target here.

MEDICAL CENTER. 9 p.m., Channel 12 (Season's Premiere) For its second season's opener, the surgical series features doctors who are sicker than patients. Just as surgeon George Grizzard is perfecting a new technique, he's stricken with a muscular ailment. The doctor can't hide his crippling condition from his pretty wife Elizabeth Ashley, and she bares all to hero Joe Gannon. Glamorous guests Grizzard and Ashley provide most of the dramatic fireworks, while Gannon conducts the climactic moments in surgery.

MUSIC HALL 9 p.m., Channel 5 (Season's Premiere) "Alan King Looks at Women's Rights and Wrongs." Slapstick is the word for it as Alan King and his guests (Anne Meara, Eva Gabor, Paul Lynde, Totie Fields) "poke a little fun at women's search for equality," Women's Lib adherents aren't likely to be amused, but here and there through the hour, there's a point or two that strikes home. "We're all equals now, I'm as much of a man as you are," says Cynthia (Anne Meara), a member in good standing of the Teamster's Union.

HAWAII FIVE-O. 10 p.m., Channel 12 (Season's Premiere) Wo Fat, the diabolical Red agent, puts the heat on McGarrett again, to begin season Number 3 tonight. Fat's boys wound a United States agent who returns after spending a decade in Red China, and they take, as their hostage, the daughter of a surgeon about to operate on the agent. Hostages are a hot item now, and the series' use of the angle works. A selective guest list led by Gerald O'Loughlin is also a plus.

McCLOUD. 10 p.m., Channel 5 (Premiere). This is the first of the new "Four-in-One" concept — four different series, each running for six consecutive weeks. Dennis Weaver will hold sway for the opening six as McCloud, the deputy marshal from New Mexico assigned to the police department in New York City, his western style and habits intact. The character is a good one and Mr. Weaver plays him to the hilt. In this episode, he violates what Hollywood scriptwriters consider a New York rule — never answer a distress call — and is soon marked for murder because of what he sees or hears. There are enough twists to sustain the hour, and Weaver's relationship with co-star J. D. Cannon as the Chief of Detectives, as well as with Diana Muldaur as his girl friend, is quite good. We think you'll like McCloud — at least for six weeks.

YOUR HEALTH: Dr. Walter Alvarez

As we all know, a while ago there was much argument suggesting that the contraceptive pill is dangerous to health. The main claim has been that it causes blood clots to form in the woman's veins. It is hard to prove that the pill is responsible for these clots, if only because clots form so often in the veins of men and women who have never touched the pill. Obviously, in order to prove that the pill can cause frequent blood clotting, the investigators cannot just show that many women who took the pill got clots; they will have to show that a much greater percentage of women on the pill got clots than did women who were not on the pill.

Some experts have felt that the percentage of women with blood clots who took the pill, was greater than the percentage of women with blood clots who were not on the pill, but they pointed out also that the dangers of going through a pregnancy and childbirth are so much greater than are the dangers of getting a blood clot in a vein that women would do well to choose the minimal risk of the pill.

* * *

The other question raised was: Could the female hormone (estrogen) in the pill produce cancer? I could never fear this because: 1) every normal woman has much of the female hormone in her body from the time she is 14 or so until she is perhaps 48 and gets the menopause, and only a few women get cancer; 2) for some 30 years I have been giving female hormone to hundreds of menopausal women, and I have not had one of these women come back to say that it had seemed to produce cancer. 3) A few years ago, gynecologists at their convention agreed that they had better forget their old fear that female hormone may produce cancer. 4) I just saw the statistical curves for cancer deaths for women and men in the U.S. in the last 40 years, and among women, there has been only a slight increase in deaths, and that has been in the case of cancer of the lung, deaths which could easily be due to the smoking of cigarettes.

The mortality rate for cancer of the womb has dropped spectacularly, due almost certainly to the now widespread use of the "Pap" test in which a microscopic study is made of the secretions from the cervix, or vaginal outlet of the womb. This test enables physicians to make such an early diagnosis of cervical cancer that then a surgeon can usually work a complete cure.

For the other organs of the body, except the lungs and the stomach, the death rate from cancer has remained unchanged. The death rate for cancer of the stomach has gone down a bit, due probably to earlier diagnosis and earlier treatment with surgery.

* * *

In the cases of U.S. men, the death rate for cancer of nearly all organs has remained steady and largely unchanged. One exception is that the death rate for cancer of the stomach has dropped a bit, much as it dropped in the cases of women.

The one astounding detail on the chart showing death rates from cancer from 1940 to 1969, is a spectacular annual rise in the death rate for cancer of the lung; this has shotup until today it is five times higher than it used to be.

I mention this striking rise here only to show that the use of chemicals called carcinogens (cancer makers) can produce a tremendous increase in cancer mortality in the organ that is principally affected. The fact that in the cases of women, until recently the big change has been mainly a marked decrease in mortality from cancer (of the womb) satisfies me that the small amount of female hormone in the contraceptive pills has not been killing women.

NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS
TREE PLANTING
CONTRACT 92G9-7
Contractors are advised that the British Columbia Forest Service intends to let a contract in October, 1970 for the planting of trees on 110 acres more or less situated on an area adjoining Lot 2353B, Tretheway Creek, on the North West side of Harrison Lake.
Prospective bidders are advised to examine the area for themselves to assess conditions on the ground. Road directions to the area can be obtained from the Ranger staff at Harrison Lake.
Sealed tenders for this contract will be received by the Deputy Minister of Forests up to 4 p.m. Wednesday, October 7, 1970.
Particulars may be obtained from the Chief Forester, Parliament Buildings, Victoria, from the District Forester Vancouver or from the Forest Ranger at Harrison Lake.
Tenders will not be considered unless made out on the forms supplied, properly signed, and accompanied by a certified cheque payable to the Minister of Finance, in the sum of five per cent of the bid price.
Planting stock will be supplied free of charge by the Forest Service f.o.b. at a place designated by the Forest Service.
The lowest or any tender will not necessarily be accepted.
Tenders must be submitted in the envelope marked "Tender for Tree Planting."

Services Saturday

A memorial service will be held in the chapel of First United Church 1 p.m. Saturday for Donald Purves, 63, vice-president of the Mountain Region of the Canadian National Railway.

Purves, a former Victoria resident, died Tuesday in Edmonton.

He is survived by five sisters: Miss Jean Purves and Mrs. Alex Craigmyle, both of Victoria; Mrs. Millar McGill of Comox; Mrs. John Cordonier of Kamloops; and Mrs. Fraser MacNaughton of Toronto.

Purves was born in Newfoundland but grew up in Victoria and went to Burnside, Quadra and Victoria high schools. He was active in church work in Victoria, participating in the young men's Bible class at First United Church as well as in the Sunday school.

He attended the University of British Columbia and in 1937 received his masters degree from Columbia University.

He joined the CNR in 1938 and served with the Canadian army for three years during the Second World War. He became a member of the Order of the British Empire in 1945.

Rev. R. J. D. Morris is to officiate at the memorial service Saturday.

Canadians Injured

VENICE (Reuters) — Italian police disclosed Tuesday three Canadians were among several hundred persons injured when a freak tornado struck Venice Saturday, killing 37 persons.

The three, who are still in hospital in the nearby town of Mestre but are expected to be released soon, were in a campsite outside Venice when the tornado struck, leaving a trail of devastation.

The Canadians, all women, are Isabel Vok of Fairview, Alta., and Jean Thompson and Maggie Boyce, both of Sarnia, Ont.

'See Saigon: It's Got More'

By PETER A. JAY

SAIGON (WP) — To a newcomer, arriving here for the first time saturated with reading and briefings about Vietnam, first impressions are in a way reassuring.

The crowds, the uniforms, the noise and oily haze from the chaos of tiny vehicles in the streets, the overwhelming dinginess — these come as no surprise. Nor do the beggars, the Honda-mounted pimps, the pretty bar girls who talk of love in broken English and save their piasters.

The surprises here, at least for one new arrival, are chiefly matters of degree. There seems to be more of everything than the books and briefings promised: more vehicles, more noise, more trash in the streets and shell craters in the countryside.

CIVILITY THE RULE

Despite reports of rising anti-Americanism here — a subject for extensive commentary in the Saigon press — a newcomer's cautious conclusion is that civility is the rule rather than the exception. But there is ample opportunity for friction among allies.

"One has to admit there are certain problems that have strained American-Vietnamese friendship," concedes columnist Phan Lam Huong in the English-language Saigon Post.

"The most important of these, of course," Huong suggests, "is the traditional Vietnamese xenophobia . . . (which) foreigners, including Americans, must learn to live with."

XENOPHOBIA

There is fuel for xenophobia at every turn. For if there is one first impression that outweighs all others, it is the immensity of the American presence here.

The America mission, bent on Vietnamization of the war, makes every effort to maintain a low profile. But so large and widespread is the American estalishment that this can be a difficult task. Americans are conspicuous in Vietnam.

American military police, like their Vietnamese counterparts, frequently dart through the heavy Saigon traffic in jeeps with sirens wailing.

A Vietnamese interpreter is barred from entering the National Assembly building because he has the wrong credentials while the American journalist who accompanies him is waved through without being asked to identify himself.

DIVERS RECOVER MOTORISTS' BODIES

PORT ALICE (CP) — Navy divers recovered the bodies Tuesday of two men killed in a traffic accident near here early Sunday.

Earl Reed, 31, of Vancouver and Lloyd Zeilke, 38, of New Westminster, were killed when their truck plunged down an embankment and into an inlet.

Move to Ban Witness Fails at Ship Probe

VANCOUVER (CP) — Lawyers made strenuous but unsuccessful objections Tuesday to the taking of testimony from a photographic analyst at a federal hearing into the collision of a British Columbia government ferry and a Soviet freighter in Active Pass Aug. 2.

Judge E. J. C. Stewart, who is heading the inquiry into the collision between the Sergey Yesenin, and the ferry Queen of Victoria, ruled that the analyst, Cyril Carter Kelly of the department of national defence in Ottawa, is acceptable as an expert witness.

Lawyers had protested that Kelly was not properly qualified.

Kelly produced a plan view of the collision working from a 35-mm. transparency taken by a witness to the collision, Allan Austin of Coquitlam.

Kelly spent an hour describing to the court the techniques he employed. He said the only information he needed was the focal length of the camera and the height or width of an object appearing in the photograph.

Austin's camera has 45-mm. lens and the Galiano light, which appears on the color slide, is 15 feet, 2¾ inches high.

From these facts, Kelly prepared testimony about the plotted location of impact. His testimony will be heard today.

Kelly, who has had 12 years' experience preparing scale drawings from photographs, told the court he has no formal qualifications to prove his expertise.

It was this point to which counsel for the parties concerned objected.

Earlier, counsel for parties connected with the freighter won a ruling preventing the testimony of a witness on a graph reading taken from an automatic course recorder aboard the Soviet vessel.

The witness, the second mate from a British ship now in Vancouver, said his formal instruction in the working of such a recorder had been limited to one day.

Local Autonomy For North Urged

WHITEHORSE, Y.T. (CP) — A sales pitch on local autonomy for the Yukon Territory got a mixed reception from the joint parliamentary committee on the constitution Tuesday.

Douglas Hogarth (L—New Westminster) told a public hearing Tuesday night that a better solution than provincial status might be a deputy minister for the Yukon permanently established in the territory.

Earlier in the day, at a meeting in Dawson, Y.T., Colin Gibson, (L—Hamilton-Wentworth) said:

"We look forward to the day when the Yukon Territory attains provincial status."

Mr. Hogarth was commenting on a brief by the Yukon Chamber of Mines which said a formula should be worked out allowing a northern region to "achieve a status equal to that of the provinces."

The brief urged that the current territorial council should be allowed to veto any federal legislation that deals with areas normally belonging to the provinces.

Mr. Hogarth said that since Ottawa subsidizes the Yukon's budget the federal government should have a say in how it is administered.

SEES GAP

He suggested that the main difficulty is that federal officials are too far from the scene, creating a "communication gap."

If a deputy minister were placed in the Yukon to deal directly with territorial affairs many of the problems would be cleared up.

David Robertson, secretary-treasurer of the chamber, said it has had trouble getting its point of view across to the federal government despite trips to Ottawa to comment on such legislation as the Yukon Placer Mining Act.

Mr. Gibson's remarks in Dawson came after James Mellor former mayor of the town, and Erik Nielsen, (PC—Yukon) said the territory should some day become a province.

Mr. Gibson was supported by Senator Muriel Fergusson (L—New Brunswick), who said:

"I think we all agree with what Mr. Gibson has said. We won't forget to carry to Ottawa the request you have made."

Teacher Help Urged

The provincial government was challenged Tuesday to hire unemployed teachers to help train other unemployed people on welfare.

The suggestion came from Opposition Leader Dave Barrett, a social worker, after he attacked rehabilitation Minister Phil Gaglardi for contributing only "hot air" to welfare problems in B.C.

Barrett said there will be 700 teachers on welfare this year who could teach "basic skills" to unemployed workers.

He said Gaglardi has done nothing to upgrade the work qualifications of welfare recipients and described Gaglardi's performance as minister as showing "disgraceful ignorance" of his job.

Slain Hijacker American Citizen

LONDON (AP) — The man slain while attempting to hijack an El Al airliner has been identified by the British government as Patrick Joseph Arguello, 28, a California-born American citizen who had been living in Managua, Nicaragua.

The home office said that identity was made through fingerprint files of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

In Managua, Oscar Arglo denied that the slain hijacker was his son, Patrick Jose Arguello Ryan, a graduate of an American university. He said his son left Nicaragua Aug. 26, 1969, for political reasons after giving lectures on politics at the University of Central America in Managua.

Jose is Spanish for Joseph, and a Latin-American man customarily adds his mother's maiden name to legal documents. A British source said FBI files showed that the maiden name of Arguello's mother was Kathleen Ryan, and she lives in Managua.

Oscar Arguello said his son is studying in Geneva. The home office said the man identified as Patrick Joseph Arguello was in Geneva recently.

A British spokesman said Arguello had two false passports with him, although he travelled on U.S. papers. The spokesman said the FBI found no previous record of connections between Arguello and Palestinian guerrilla organizations, but they said rilla organizations,but they said he was known to be active politically in Latin America.

The hijacker's accomplice, Leila Khaled, 24, was jailed in London Sept. 6 after a shootout aboard the Amsterdam-to-New York Israeli jetliner forced it to land at London's Heathrow Airport. The man was killed by security guards on the plane acting as protection against Arab hijackers.

Professors, Lawyer Head 'Cells' in India

By RAM SUNDAR
Canadian Press Correspondent

BOMBAY — Maoist revolutionaries are believed to have set up several "cells" in this teeming industrial metropolis of five million people.

What has particularly intrigued the Indian government is that most of the men and women in charge of these cells seem to belong to the upper strata of Indian society.

In a recent swoop the Bombay police arrested a dozen persons including five college professors and a woman lawyer.

Hitherto it was thought that the Maoist movement in Bombay was confined only to factory workers. The police now are working on the theory that, as one official put it, "Maosim in western India may be percolating from top to bottom."

The arrested persons have been closely questioned at police headquarters. There are reports that more college professors, lawyers and other intellectuals may be involved in the subversive movement.

LEADERS SURPRISED

Documents seized by the police are said to indicate that the Maoists are planning a violent campaign against the government.

Among other things, the papers captured by the authorities tell of arrangements for strikes in factories and colleges, according to reports published here.

The emergence of the Maoist revolutionaries in Bombay has surprised the government which had assumed that the country's big western metropolis and premier port would be free from the infection because of the comparatively high level of industrial prosperity and its tradition of moderation and discipline.

Discrimination Study Completed

The Canada Department of Labor reports it has produced a bibliography of studies which document job discrimination against ethnic groups in Canada and the United States.

Canadian studies fall under the headings of Indians, Eskimos, Negroes and other ethnic groups.

Anerican studies include Negroes and Jews, as well as a look at fair employment practices legislation and human rights legislation.

Also listed are six British studies and 17 unpublished theses for Master of Social Work degrees, most of them from the University of Toronto.

The bibliography was compiled for the Labor Department's Economics and Research Branch and the Fair Employment Practices Branch by Mrs. Karen Herring.

Compensation Pay Hiked

Labor Minister Leslie Peterson said Tuesday that maximum workmen's compensation monthly payments will be increased from $412.50 to $475 on Jan. 1, 1971.

This will give B.C. the highest rate in Canada for worker-caused injuries, Peterson said.

The Workmen's Compensation Board will increase the maximum wage on which compensation payments are based from $6,600 to $7,600 annually.

The maximum wage rate was last increased in 1965.

Cruiser Sinks Near Pt. Hardy

PORT HARDY (CP) — A 40-foot pleasure cruiser burned and sank three miles south of here Tuesday.

Search and rescue officials said the only occupant of the vessel, the Toletus II, was picked up by a fishing boat.

HOME GARDEN

Pampas Plumes to Appear Shortly

By HILDA BEASTALL

If you are one gardener worrying about the Pampas grass not putting up its plumes this year, take a look at the plant now. Unless it is small or newly set, you are likely to find the thickening stems appearing. Before the month is out, silvery plumes will be waving in the fall breezes.

Hilda

Garden encyclopedias list Pampas under Cortaderia selloana which may have either creamy silver plumes or silvery pink reaching as high as 15 feet in mature specimens.

A more dwarf form has appeared in recent years, better suited to our smaller gardens. It is sold under the name of Cortaderia selloana pumila, and grows only to three feet.

Although native to South American countries of Ecuador and Argentina, the Pampas is only badly damaged here in winters like 1968-69 when deep snow melts and then freezes down into the depths of the massed papery stems.

Even in that year, a number of younger plants having less dried material around their bases escaped damage.

This year the survivors are about to flower.

Cortaderias are true grasses, with spikelets of tiny flowers borne on long stems in dense masses which form graceful plumy heads much admired by visitors and newcomers.

The only other place in Canada where they might be seen is in a sheltered area of Niagara Peninsula, but even there I imagine the freeze and thaw in most years would be too much for them.

Here, the Pampas likes any ordinary garden soil, clay or sandy, preferably in an open sunny position to encourage flowering.

Place it where its ultimate size of eight feet or more across will not restrict your progress in the garden, for Pampas leaves are roughly barbed. They tear the skin badly when dragged across an arm.

If you want to keep the plumes for indoor decoration don't leave them on the plant until the particles shatter.

The only time to cut the plumes for keeping is when the spikelets are well formed or "budded" (just like ordinary flower buds being visible) but before they open and shatter.

Dry the plumes in warm air by standing them upright. They will then fluff out.

We've all had the experience of living room rug and furniture being covered with tiny, sticking particles of Pampas fluff, making it definitely worth checking the plant each day when once the plumes commence showing, so that the exact moment can be chosen for cutting.

Boy, 11, Will Get Books Published

TORONTO (CP) — Propped up on a yellow-flowered cushion in front of his father's typewriter, William Bertie Provost Robson whipped off a 160-page trio of pint-sized adventure tales a year ago last summer — just before his 10th birthday.

This month his books, complete with tables of contents, footnotes, forewords and afterwords, will be published by New Press, a fledgling Toronto firm.

The feat is entirely unspectacular to the author, a cool, articulate, blond 11-year-old, son of Dr. John M. Robson, a University of Toronto English professor.

"I guess I've been writing books since I was in kindergarten," says William.

A number of youngsters write stories, but as novelist Margaret Atwood points out in the book's introduction, none of them get published. She says the only other known literary prodigy, Daisy Ashford, wrote a novel at age eight but it was not published until 1919, well after the author had grown up.

"For years and years and years I've been looking for work by children for children," says Jim Bacque, the New Press partner who happened on William's manuscripts. "I always thought it would be more appealing."

At the Robson's cottage on Go-Home-Lake, William was inspired by the sight of his father at work on a book.

He plunked himself down at the typewriter between swims, picked out a table of contents as a vague plan of attack and clipped through all three books without so much as a stop for retyping or revision.

"It's the first part of the book which is so crucial. Because any minutes before I get the plot really going I might give up. But if I don't, I begin to feel obligated to the characters. I've gotten them in a mess and I've got to get them out again."

The stories are called The Magic Mailbox, The Bronian War and Trouble Underground. They're a fast-action fantasy of an orphan gang that tumbles down a magic mail chute at the orphanage and into another world. The triology is sprinkled with puns, poems, cloud people called Softies, dragons who speak in rhyming couplets and queens who need to be told "what boys were."

Cracks in walls widen to horrid dark dungeons, spiders stand guard over malevolent machines with man-size test tubes and wars are fought with "G-44 maxi-turrets" only to be won by girls.

New Press invested $5,000 on the trilogy in a bright blue, $7.50 boxed set with 12 full-color illustrations by the author.

All 23 of the original illustrations had to be redone for reproduction, a process for which William invented his own tracing board out of an old tea trolley top over a box in which he set a gooseneck lamp and a cooling fan.

Mrs. Robson worries whether they have done the right thing in allowing William to be published and publicized.

William recalls the contract:

"I didn't understand it so I just decided I'd sign — after I looked at the royalties."

GORGE WORK WINS AWARD FOR FIRM

A local engineering firm has won an award of merit in a national contest organized by the Canadian Good Roads Association.

The firm, Willis, Cunliffe, Tait and Co. Ltd., one of five which won awarls from a total of 30 submissions.

The award was for the design and supervision work on the road and promenade improvements on the Saanich side of the Gorge waterway.

The Canadian Good Roads Association invited submissions for designs intended to create better living and encourage imaginative design of road systems and ancillary works.

KARPIN ON BRIDGE

By FRED L. KARPIN

In recent years, in expert circles, it has become a moot question as to which card to lead in partner's bid suit when one possesses three low cards in his suit (e.g., 8-5-2). There are those who advocate the lead of the highest, and there are also those who feel that the third from the highest is the better lead in the long run.

In the deal presented today, our East-West defenders were employing the lead of the highest in partner's suit. The result was that our East defender faced a dilemma at trick two.

East, West vulnerable. West deals.

Opening lead: Nine of ♡.

On West's opening lead of the heart nine, dummy's 10 was put up, East covered with the queen—and South played the four-spot!

When one examines all four hands, it is obvious that all East had to do at trick two was to return a low heart, driving out South's ace, and simultaneously establishing his heart suit. But East had a serious problem, since he didn't know whether partner's original lead was from a doubleton 9-x or from a tripleton 9-x-x.

If West had started with the doubleton 9-x, then South had started with the tripleton A-x-x. And if East, at trick two returned a low heart, South would play low from his own hand and dummy's jack would win the trick.

After much cogitation, East, at trick two, decided to lead a diamond, his partner's bid suit. South covered this with the queen, and West took his ace. Declarer now had his contracted-for nine tricks: one spade, one heart, one diamond, and six clubs.

It should be pointed out that if South had taken East's queen of hearts at trick one, he would have gone down. Had he made his play, then when West eventually obtained the lead with his diamond ace, he would have returned another heart. The board's J-3 would now be ambushed by East's K-8-7-2; and East would have made four heart tricks.

In evaluating South's behavior, he made an excellent play when he permitted East's queen of hearts to win the opening lead. In so doing, he put East to a guess—and when one has to guess, there are occasions when he misguesses.

BENSON SEEKS NEW TAX TALKS

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister Edgar Benson today suggested another meeting with provincial finance ministers this fall before the government begins to make final decisions on its plan to revise the Income Tax Act.

Sources at the federal-provincial premiers meeting said Benson also promised the premiers and their provincial treasurers he would meet them again next spring, as soon as the government introduces in Parliament its definitive legislation revising the act.

The government now hopes to have its white paper proposals rewritten in the form of draft legislation by next March or April. The finance ministers meeting probably will be held in November or December this year.

The Constitution: They'll Try Again Next Year

Times News Services

Ottawa and the provinces have shifted the emphasis from writing a new Canadian constitution to amending the existing British North America Act.

This was the only major accomplishment of two days of federal-provincial talks in Ottawa ending Tuesday. Agreement was reached to pursue an amending formula at two meetings in 1971 — in February in Ottawa and June in Victoria.

Speed-Up Attempt Endorsed

And there also was general agreement — with no specific pledges — to try to speed-up the whole constitutional review process and "keep the public involved and fully informed of progress."

By renewing the emphasis on an amending formula, the constitutional talks appeared to be reverting to their start when it was decided to leave such a formula until after all other constitutional changes had been agreed on. But Prime Minister Trudeau and most of the premiers discounted such suggestions.

Most of the delegates had supported arguments advanced by Premier John Robarts of Ontario that a formula should be established so that constitutional changes can be made in Canada as they are agreed upon, rather than waiting for the completion of the over-all constitutional review.

Robarts said that agreement on an entirely new constitution will be "a long time coming." Premier Ross Thatcher of Saskatchewan said it wouldn't be in his lifetime.

The last time an amending formula was high in the news was in 1964 when the so-called Fulton-Favreau formula was finally shot down by Quebec after several years of federal-provincial negotiations.

Over-All Reveiw to Continue

But this time, other constitutional matters won't be held up in the process. The over-all review will continue, as now, and Trudeau said that delegations at this conference supported plans to conclude the job "as rapidly as possible."

After five constitutional meetings, all of them with extensive publicity, the leaders appeared sensitive about not having any easily-digestable announcements to make about agreements on specific subjects.

Premier Robarts said Tuesday night it is important that the public realize the complexity of the job and that worthwhile progress is being quickly made in the search for an updated constitution.

Unless some rapid progress is made, said Trudeau, it will be necessary to "dampen the enthusiasm of expectation."

Officials expressed fears privately that unless some concrete results can be pointed out soon, the public will lose all interest in the seemingly endless string of constitutional talks.

Trudeau has said frequently that he favors public involvement in the constitutional review process.

Anti-Pollution Drive Set

Apart from the amending formula, this conference decided to study possible new machinery for handling intergovernmental relations, and also decided to spur on the work of the continuing committee of officials by giving it more specific directions.

In the area of pollution control, said a communique, it was agreed to study the constitutional aspects of environmental management while continuing to co-operate in anti-pollution measures under the existing constitutional arrangements.

Virtually all the premiers ended the constitutional discussions with some degree of satisfaction over the course of events.

Premier Robert Bourassa of Quebec, saying he found the negotiations "satisfactory," also said that his province "is less isolated than I thought."

While Quebec had some specific demands, because of WOODEN PADDLE held by Toronto trustee Graham Scott is used on emotionally-disturbed children at Brant Street School. Trustees were told the use of the paddle was considered "therapeutic reinforcement-type therapy" and was done with the knowledge of school board officials.

Emotionally Disturbed Spanked With Paddle

TORONTO (CP) — A public school principal acknowledged Tuesday he and two teachers had used a plywood paddle to spank emotionally disturbed children and had washed their mouths with soap and water for swearing.

Robert Holmeshaw, former principal of Brant Street public school and now principal of the proposed Oak Street school, told a meeting of the management committee of the board of education that he personally applied the 14-inch paddle.

Ronald Jones, director of the city board of education, told the committee the paddling was considered part of a "therapeutic reinforcement-type therapy" and was done with the knowledge of board officials.

Board rules forbid the use of anything except a strap for corporal punishment. The committee asked that a full report on the incidents at Brant be brought to the board.

Mitchell Lennox, acting assistant superintendent of public schools, told trustees the paddle was reported used 12 times on seven children at the Brant school during the last school year.

These children were in a special rehabilitation class for children aged 6 to 10 with emotional problems. The punishment was administered by the principal or a teacher before the whole class.

USED FOUL LANGUAGE

Mr. Holmeshaw said that in another classroom the children's mouths had been washed with soap and water three times because they used foul language.

"With two of them it worked marvellously—they stopped swearing," he said. "With one it had no effect."

With the paddle he had administered a sharp smack on the buttocks, never more than twice at a time.

Mr. Holmeshaw acknowledged that using the paddle was "bad judgment" but objected to being accused of being "a tyrant and beating kids."

"I wasn't," he said. "I was trying to gring about changes in behavior."

Curtis Urges Strong UBCM To Counteract Weak MLAs

By CLEM CHAPPLE
Times Staff

PENTICTON — Mayor Hugh Curtis of Saanich appealed today for a stronger organization of B.C. municipalities to overcome the inadequacy of provincial legislature members who he says don't understand municipal problems.

Curtis, outgoing president of the Union of B.C. Municipalities, said, in his president's report before delegates attending the union's annual convention, that a strong lobby must be formed to fill the provincial government in on municipal problems about which MLAs remain ignorant.

URGES MOVE

Curtis called on delegates to support his suggestion of moving UBCM offices to Victoria from New Westminster, a move which would also strengthen the lobbying power of the union.

The Saanich Mayor added that to be effective, UBCM permanent staff should be enlarged from its four members to meet the increased need.

In his prepared statement, Curtis said "it is somewhat startling to experience, first-hand, the rather profound lack of knowledge among a number of members of the Legislative Assembly with respect to this 'other level' of government."

Curtis did not blame all MLAs directly, saying that the increasing intricacy of municipal operations over the last 15 years has caused the situation. But the result was that "the rank and file provincial representative does not have a clear and concise understanding of local and regional government.

IGNORANCE CITED

Curtis singled out the province's regional government system as an area in which MLAs "on both sides of the house" are ignorant, "and there are some who don't have the slightest background

CANADIAN TO HEAD ENVIRONMENT TALKS

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — Maurice F. Strong, highly regarded head of Canada's international aid program, has been appointed secretary-general of the United Nations conference on human environment in Stockholm in 1972.

Strong, who is president of the Canadian International Development Agency, is expected to take up his new post here Jan. 1.

The UN announced Wednesday that with the rank of UN undersecretary-general he will assume principal responsibility for environmental affairs with his chief job being to prepare for the Stockholm conference.

Until Jan. 1, he will act in a consultative capacity as UN Secretary-General U Thant's principal adviser on economic affairs.

Gretel Loses Protest

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP)—Intrepid was declared the winner today of the first yacht race for the America's Cup after the race committe dismissed a protest of Australia's Gretel II.

The triumph officially gave the American yacht a 1-0 lead in the best-of-seven series which resumes Thursday.

Army Officers Taking Over

Times News Services

AMMAN — King Hussein today fired his civilian cabinet and replaced it with loyal army officers who immediately declared martial law in Jordan.

Rebel guerrilla forces meanwhile united under extremist Yasser Arafat and pledged to fight the new regime to the end. The guerrillas are seeking all-out war against Israel while the Hussein regime is trying for a peace pact.

Arafat did not order an offensive but ordered his men to defy an order by King Hussein's new government and refuse to surrender their arms.

As the crisis deepended in Jordan, a top-level United States force, including the chairman of the joint chiefs of staff and President Nixon's national security adviser, met in Washington to consider the developments.

The Jordanian military government is headed by Brig. Mohammed Daoud, a Palestinian born near Jerusalem.

But the real power was invested in Field Marshal Habis Majali, British-trained Arab Legion officer, who was named military governor of the entire country.

With Middle East peace prospects looking dimmer by the hour, Israeli Premier Golda Meir flew to the United States today for talks with Nixon and other top U.S. officials.

DISCUSS SITUATION

She and Nixon were expected to discuss the Israeli military requests that triggered Egypt's denunciation of the United States.

Official sources reported Daoud said early today that the military government wanted to implement the latest ceasefire agreements with the guerrillas.

Observers in the Jordanian capital said it seemed clear that if the guerrillas rejected the olive branch, the new military government would not hesitate to move against them in a bid to end the government-commando crises once and for all.

Such a step could bring Jordan — already in a state of near-anarchy — into virtual civil war.

Arafat issued strict instruc-

'Israel Broke Truce'—U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — United States officials say they believe Israel has violated the Middle East's ceasefire on one occasion in an effort to get photographs of alleged Egyptian violations.

Evidence available to the U.S., officials said, indicates that an Israeli reconnaissance plane flew over Egyptian territory to take pictures of anti-aircraft missile sites on the Egyptian side of the Suez canal front.

'Smeared' City Father Cries Foul

TORONTO (CP) — Ald. Robert Yuill has been voted the "most useless" member of North York borough council in a contest he called "reprehensible and irresponsible."

"Public office demands some respect," he said Wednesday in an interview after receiving 22 of a possible 74 votes in the contest staged by two North York groups.

"If politicians can be smeared like this, responsible people won't run for office."

Mayor Basil Hall came a close second in the contest held by the borough's Liberal youth committee and the Citizen's Committee for Change.

Long Strike Feared; Bargaining Posponed

DETROIT (AP) — Leonard Woodcock, United Auto Workers president, planned picket-line visits to rally union members today as the prospect loomed larger that the General Motors strike may be a long one.

Serious bargaining was postponed until Tuesday, union sources said, although both sides were to meet briefly today to work out an agenda for future talks.

The UAW had pulled nearly 344,000 workers off their jobs in Canada and the United States Tuesday in support of new contract demands.

Production continued at Ford Motor Co. and Chrysler Corp., where contracts also have expired but which have been granted at least temporary strike immunity by the UAW.

Whatever terms are reached at GM will set a pattern for settlements at Ford and Chrysler.

The union and the automaker put the price tag of the strike at more than $118 million a day, including lost wages and sales.

Meanwhile, at GM's car assembly plant at St. Therese, Que., workers said they are having no problems getting extra jobs in the bush or at a federal airport construction site 20 miles north.

Harold Wakefield, corporate manager of Duplate of Canada which employs 1,000 persons at its Oshawa and Hawkesbury plants, said most of its output of giass goes to GM and "if our customer is on strike that pretty well shuts us down."

TOT FINDS GUN, KILLS NEIGHBOR

HURST, Ill. (UPI) — A 3-year-old boy who found a loaded .22 calibre target pistol on the floorboard of his father's car shot a neighbor to death Tuesday night and wounded a boy.

Authorities said Roger Tennyson, 21, was struck four times by bullets fired by Jimmy Hawk.

David Tackett, 12, was struck in the hip by one bullet and was admitted to Holden Hospital at Carbondale.

Authorities said the Hawk boy fired all six shots in the pistol as Tennyson and Tackett approached him and tried to talk him into putting the gun down.

The boy had wandered into Tennyson's yard after finding the gun in the car of his father, Allen Hawk.

Canadian Air Industry Knocked Into Tailspin

TORONTO (CP) — Tight money and defence spending cuts in the United States have combined to throw Canada's aircraft industry into a tailspin.

Several thousand Canadian industry workers have been laid off as contracts and subcontracts for aircraft components become scarce.

President F. P. Mitchell of Orenda Ltd., Toronto, a manufacturer of jet engines, says he sees "very little aerospace growth in the next decade in Canada."

His company recently laid off 300 of its 1,850 employees. Another 300 are expected to be laid off soon.

The aircraft industry in Canada employs a total of about 35,000 and generates shipments of about $700 million a year.

Purchasing reductions are widespread among the industry's major customers — air lines, U.S. and Canadian defence departments and private corporations which buy aircraft for business purposes.

CANADAIR HIT

Canadair Ltd. of Montreal is one of the companies hit hardest by the aerospace slump.

Since the beginning of the year, Canadair has reduced its work force to 5,600 from 8,500. Company officials expect to continue layoffs at a rate of 40 to 50 a week if new contracts are not received.

Canadair is currently hoping to drum up business with a new water-bomber it has produced.

The Quebec and French governments have already bought 30 of the CL-215 aircraft and Canadair hopes to persuade the Canadian government that it needs a national fire-fighting fleet.

Another project, the CL-89 surveillance drone, is a potential source of business. It is classed as a "non-offensive weapon," and is capable of scanning several miles of terrain and obtaining detailed photographs. NATO countries have already bought 282 of these.

Other Canadian aerospace contractors have experienced similar difficulties.

United Aircraft of Canada Ltd., Montreal has reduced its staff by about 500 to 5,000.

CLOSED REPAIR SHOPS

Fairey Co., of Dartmouth, N.S. closed repair shops, putting 400 out of work.

One exception to the widespread malaise is Douglas Aircraft of Canada. The Toronto-based company is producing 90-foot wing sections for a DC-10 airliner contract it holds.

It is also producing wing and tail sections for DC-9s and hopes to increase its work force in the next few months.

The aerospace industry in Canada has always been subject to great fluctuations.

Two years ago it enjoyed a healthy boom. In 1968 the production rate of the industry increased 25 per cent over the previous year and orders for about $400 million poured into the country, mostly from the U.S.

The Vietnam war served to stimulate Canadian aerospace production with large accounts from the U.S. defence department and spillovers from U.S. manufacturers swamped with orders.

DEALERS WARNED

Car Buyers Must Get Protection

BANFF, (CP) — Canadian automobile dealers were told recently that governments will have to intervene if the industry does not act to prevent abuses in the services offered under purchase contracts now used.

"The time seems well at hand for dealers as a group to shift their attention to those positive actions which are going to be necessary on their part to assure consumer satisfaction," said S. D. Turner, director of the consumer protection division, Ontario department of financial and commercial affairs.

Turner, speaking to the national convention of the Federation of Automobile Dealer Associations of Canada, said both federal and provincial governments already have gone a considerable distance with legislation to protect the purchasers of automobiles.

"It would take a crystal ball to predict what action governments might take in the next few years but it is not difficult to spot areas of concern to consumers and their advocates."

MAJOR PROBLEM

The difficulties encountered by the public in obtaining warranty service under both the manufacturer's warranty and the warranty issued by used-car dealers are a major problem, Turner said. There were examples of dealers offering a 50-50 warranty on a used car who doubled the price of subsequent repairs then "shared" the costs with the purchaser. Other dealers delay in attending to warranties, or find excuse for failure to perform the repairs they are quick to diagnose once the vehicle is out of warranty.

The automobile purchase contract, Turner said, has been abused so that "instead of an offer and acceptance we now have a demand and a compliance."

The only purpose of the form contracts now in use, he said, is "to ensure that every possible legal right and remedy is available to the seller or lender."

"There is almost never any clause giving a positive right to the consumer."

Federal Funds Available To Denison

OTTAWA (CP) — Energy Minister J. J. Greene says Denison Mines Ltd. could apply for government aid if funds were necessary to keep the company's Elliot Lake uranium mine operating after June 30, 1971.

Stephen B. Roman, company chairman, announced the mine would close on that date. It would likely reopen in 1974 when first deliveries on a 10-year contract to supply Tokyo Electric Co. Inc. with 33.5 million pounds of uranium are to be made.

Greene said the government would be willing to make funds available to Denison Mines Ltd. if the company applied for them. But the "onus is on Denison" to keep the mine open.

TODAY'S GRAIN PRICES

WINNIPEG (CP) — Prices were easier in most commodities in generally light trading on the Winnipeg Grain EXXCHANGE TODAY.

Barley and rye were on a strong undertone as experter inqjiry was in evidence. There was good buying in barley by domestic shippers for eastern feeders and rye attracted expert buying and fractional gains were posted in all futures.

There was some liquidation pressure in flax and prices were down about one cent in all futures.

Vancouver rapeseed was also on an easier pattern with a small amount of buying by domestic crushers. Most activity in the Thunder Bay rapeseed was in the April futures.

Lakehead prices for class two and IGA wheat: No. 1 northern up ¼, No. 2 1¼, Nos. 3 and 4 up 2¼ and all durums up 2¼ cents.

CHICAGO (AP) — Corn and soybeans futures prices moved ahead nearly two cents a bushel on the Chicago Board of Trade and then, for the second straight day, the advances gradually eroded under profit-taking.

Wheat and oats futures, which had generally reflected early strength in corn and soy beans, also weakened at the close.

Soybean oil futures closed on a strong tone but soybean meal was weak.

Early buying of corn and soybean futures was influenced by scattered rainfall in recent days and forescasts indicating the rain will continue for several days.

Large Grain Sales Hinted By Sen. Hayes

JASPER, Alta. (CP) — Prospects theat all the grain in Canada will be disposed of within 12 months are excellent, Senator Harry Hays (L. Alberta) says.

"I understand that at this time next year . . . probably all the grain in Canada will be disposed of and there will be hardly any reserves," he told the Canadian Agriculture Chemicals Association convention.

Senator Hays said his statement was based on "very good authority."

Later, at a news conference, he said the U.S. has lost 10 per cent of its corn crop and there is a fantastic demand for barley, particularly in Japan and Europe.

"In the last 30 days, it has been most encouraging and I have reason to believe there are some large sales coming up in the near future — they've already probably been negotiated."

The senator, former federal agriculture minister, would not elaborate further.

House Hunting Disappearing Art

Apartment Renting Best As Vacancy Signs Abound

By PETER McNELLY

The day of the low-rental family house in Victoria appears to be ending.

At the same time, apartment accommodation here offers a wide choice to the prospective tenant.

House-hunting in Victoria has been a scramble for several years, but recent indications show that the scramble has turned into jam.

Until two or three weeks ago, for example, the city's housing registry had no listings for rental houses. Today it lists only seven.

During the summer months, the registry was able to place only 48 out of 178 applicants. And these people had to settle for apartments because no houses were available.

The registry listed a total of 135 apartments during the summer. Today it lists only six duplexes and nine one-bedroom suites.

In a haphazard way, these figures show that while Victoria has not yet approached the housing crisis Vancouver residents have to cope with — rents are still lower here and some houses are available — chances of renting a house are slim.

The housing registry is an agency of the Community Council of Greater Victoria and is supported by grants from the Victoria Real Estate Board and the department of municipal affairs.

Property owners and sometimes real estate agencies list their rental offerings with the agency. But by no means all rental homes appear on the registry's files.

•

The house-hunter can also find available listings in newspaper classified sections, and it's here that the switch from homes to apartments becomes most apparent.

Today, five and one-half columns of apartments are listed in the classified section. Two years ago this month, only one and one-half columns of apartment listings appeared.

Garth Homer, the Community Council's executive director, said today that one major change in the region's housing market in the last few years is the acceptability of children.

•

When apartment accommodation was relatively scarce two years ago, few apartments would take families with children. Today, because of increased apartment construction and therefore higher vacancy rates in the area, some apartments have reduced rents and allowed children.

Unless a house is old, out of town or very small, it's unlikely to rent for less than $135 a month.

In this morning's classified section, 26 unfurnished houses were listed for rent. Four asked less than $125. One of those was a duplex.

Most of the remainder listed rents from $150 to over $300.

What this means is that a family man with three or four children must expect to shell out a good chunk of his take-home pay for rent.

For the poor the problem is more pressing. Blanshard Court, for example, has a waiting list three years long. Demand is high and the turnover low.

Many poor people, those who cannot live in Blanshard Court, have to live in substandard housing.

•

A city social worker said a recent survey of housing for the poor showed that many live in unsafe, poorly-heated firetraps for which they pay exorbitant rents.

One case brought to light this week revealed that an elderly couple on a combined old-age pension of $222 had to live in a house which a city fire inspector discovered had an unsafe fireplace and oil stove.

The house, at 1817 Quadra, rents for $100 a month. The couple, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Williams, ages 86 and 73, were given the place at a reduced rent if they promised to fix it up.

•

But Victoria welfare director Alex Davidson said the landlord had been notified that it is his responsibility to repair the house. He said the welfare department would help the couple find another place to live if they wanted to move.

Another characteristic of some older homes here, is that they're on land which is no longer zoned for residential use.

This means property taxes are higher, and this can result in higher rents than the quality of the house deserves. Many of these places will be torn down for apartments or commercial development.

In the meantime, they are usually rented to low income people, who, as usual, have to take what they can get.

THE "A" CONCEPT

No Rumble Seat In a New Basic

By Jack Scott

The news that the Ford Motor Company is soon to put into production "a very basic car"—a car as basic, indeed, as the Model "T" or the Model "A"—sent me inpetuously hippity-hoppity to Peter Pollen's place to order one.

So the car will have a plywood body? So it will have canvas seats? Who cares? The price will be under $900. That's a price that's right. Besides, as a one-time owner of no less than three Model "A" beauties, I've been dreaming of this day when the auto men would get back to a car that's economical, simple and marvellous fun.

Pollen, the alderman and Ford dealer, is so young, a mere stripling of 42, that there's not even a Model "A", much less a Model "T", in his past. There is one, however, in his future since the lads at his shop are lovingly restoring what appears to be a 1930 two-door sedan, a sight that had me fairly oozing nostalgia. Oh, that was a good one.

Scott

This rather diverted me from my original mission, but it turns out, in any event, that the new Ford basic, "the modern Model 'T' for the masses," is to be marketed only in Australia and Asian nations. Unless I can manage a trip to Brisbane or Hong Kong I'll have to stick to what I've got.

But Peter agreed with me, as a loyal Ford man naturally would, that the "T" and the "A"—always referred to, respectively, as Henry's Tin Lizzie and the Ubiquitous Model "A"—were magnificent automobiles. A. W. Miller, Sports Illustrated's authority on vintage cars, once described the "A" series, which began in 1927 and went until 1931, as "the finest all-round automobile ever built." Anyone who ever owned one will doubtless agree.

What makes a man cling so stubbornly to the memory of a venerable crate that now seems downright comical? Peter's hunch is that it was the incredible rapport that developed between the driver and the machine.

"If something went wrong there was a good chance that you could fix it," he said. "If it wouldn't start you could crank it—and the 'A', by the way, had the first removable crank. You operated the car so there was an affinity that could become a kind of love."

That, I think, is exactly it. Looking into the front seat of the "A" that he's restoring, I was engulfed in unbelievably precise recollections of the '31 roadster (with rumble seat) that completely and forever stole my heart.

The spark control lever on the left side of the steering column and the throttle lever to the right had to be adjusted for take-off just exactly so or nothing would happen. The choke, under the dashboard at the far right, so far to the right that you might inadvertently brush the silken knees of your companion, had to be twisted twice and pulled out precisely three and one-eighth inches or it was no go. Absolutely nothing was automatic. Perhaps, as Peter says, that was the delight of it.

★ ★ ★

Surely, I ventured, if the Australian-Asian basic Ford were to be made available here it would be just as much a runaway seller as the '29 and '30 Fords that each went over the million-mark in sales?

Pollen thought not.

"The basic car is coming back as a concept of North American automobile making, but they're not all that basic," he said. "Our own Pinto, Chevrolet's Vegas and American Motors' Gremlin are basic to a point, but they're more properly described as mini-luxury cars. In an affluent society the car-buyer isn't going to go for canvas seats or willingly substitute wool-lined driving gloves for an efficient heater.

"On the other hand there are profound changes taking place in the public acceptance of cars generally. You might say that the seduction, or the honeymoon, the creation of a desire for a status symbol, is pretty much over. Ralph Nader had done a lot to de-glamorize the automobile. The need to combat pollution is another factor.

★ ★ ★

"Then, too, there are so many alternative things that a man can find to spend his money on today — the stock market, a cottage, a boat — that the great, big, sexy automobile is no longer the attraction it was. The manufacturers see and are now meeting a new demand for efficient transportation, for styles that don't change drastically from year to year, for a power-to-weight ratio compatible with high-speed highway conditions and cities that are running out of parking room. That means the return of a basic car, in essence, but one with comfort and advanced technology. We hope it will mean, as well, a car that people will learn to love just as they did the Model 'A'."

At that red hot minute, as it happened, the mini Ford Pinto was being readied for its first public unveiling, but I was too busy mooning over that ancient '30 two-door and certain memories of what went on in rumble seats to wrench myself into the present.

Young Man Rescues Woman

An unidentified young man rescued an elderly woman from a house fire Tuesday, then vanished before she could thank him.

Mrs. Margaret Percy, 59, of 1239 Pandora, was rescued from the upstairs of the smoke-filled house.

The rescuer was the same man who initially warned Mrs. Margaret Winterburn that the house was on fire. He dashed upstairs while fire officials were called.

Oxygen treatment on the front porch of the house and follow-up care at St. Joseph's Hospital left Mrs. Percy in good condtion despite an already existing lung ailment.

Fire officials blamed careless smoking for the blaze, and damage was estimated at $250.

Saanich Bus Runs To Continue

Normal bus service by Vancouver Island Coach Lines to the Saanich Peninsula will continue for at least the time being, acting manager Jack Thomas said today.

The company had applied to the B.C. Public Utilities Commission to end its service to Cordova Bay, West Saanich and Sidney-Deep Cove effective Tuesday claiming losses of more than $100,000 a year.

Later, the company suggested to peninsula municipalities a sharply reduced service. Municipal councils have tabled the proposal for study.

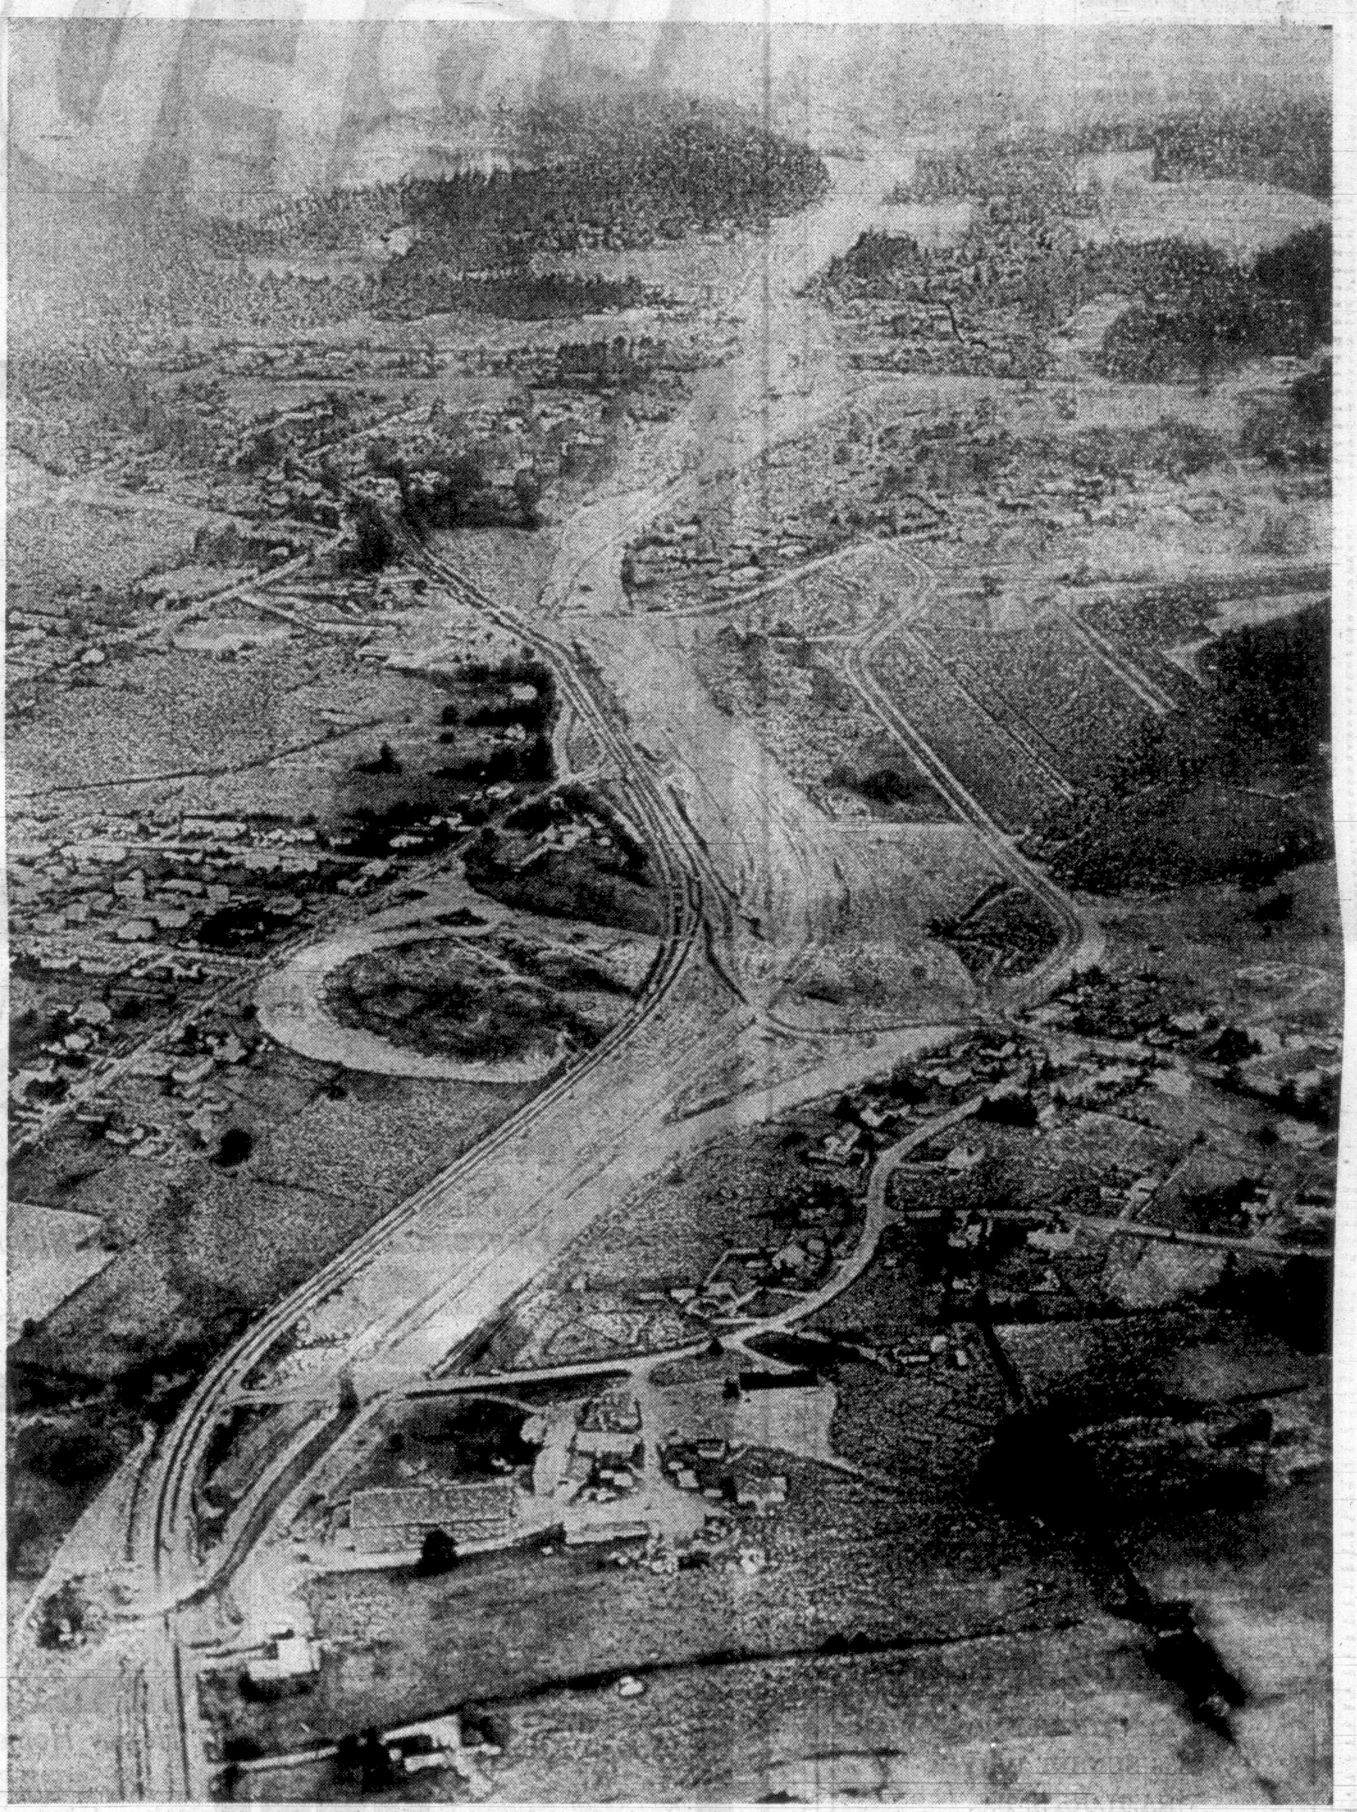
Thomas said the PUC has advised the company it cannot act on the application to end service by the requested date and therefore that date is suspended.

No indication was given when the PUC will deal with the matter.

JEWELRY STOLEN

An American visitor who stopped to shoot a round of golf at Uplands Golf Club Tuesday was robbed of $1,450 in jewelry when his car was ransacked on the club parking lot.

Samuel Taylor, of Portland, reported the theft of a wedding band and diamond ring valued at $1,200, a diamond watch worth $250, $7 cash and a number of credit cards, Oak Bay police said.



Do You Know the Way to Swartz Bay?

People driving the Pat Bay Highway through Royal Oak these days hope the highways department knows what it's doing — because no one else does. Lighter stripe running up photo indicates where giant earth movers and lime green dump trucks have stripped away soil and rock to expose clay. Street to right off highway at bottom is Dieppe. Elk Lake shows at top of photo. In between, it's a mess. A four-lane divided highway with overpasses will emerge, sometime next year. Pilot Jim Murdoch took Times photographer Bill Halkett up for a look this morning and realized it's easier to fly the route now than drive it.

APPEAL GOAL $701,314

Emotional Send-Off for Campaign

The 1970 United Red Feather-Red Cross Appeal drive officially opened Tuesday with an emotional plea for brotherly love from campaign chairman Commodore R. V. Henning and entertainer Bill Kenny.

Lt.-Governor John Nicholson also attended the luncheon at the Old Forge, and in a brief speech said the appeal had the joint support of all Greater Victoria mayors.

"You see, the only time they can speak with one voice is when they're out of town," Nicholson said, referrikg to the fact that area mayors are in Penticton this week for a convention of the Union of B.C. Municipalities.

His remarks brought good-natured laughter from the audience.

Then Kenny, leader of the original Ink Spots, made a long and moving plea for charity after which Henning said he'd planned to end with a few more words about the Appeal's 1970 member agencies, but didn't feel he could add to Kenny's speech.

This year the United Appeal hopes to raise $701,314.

Pony Leaguers Bolster Fund

Donations continued to roll in today and push the fund that will be used to send Victoria Centennials to the world amateur baseball championship in November nearer to the half-way mark.

Through the efforts of local baseball organizations and interested individuals the fund now stands at over $1,100.

Carmarvon Pony League pitched in today with a donation of $50.

On Tuesday the Senior Amateur League, from which the majority of players on the national team will be selected following Centennials' triumph in the Canadian championship, and the Cone Mack League each added $25.

Fud objective is $3,500 which the team needs for equipment, uniforms and walking-out dress for the tourney in Colombia. These items are not covered in the grant from the Canadian Baseball Association or the federal government, which is paying 75 per cent of the travel costs.

Donations will be accepted by either mail or in person at Bell's Men's Wear, 721 Yates; Imperial Centre (Al Kubicek), Hillside and Shelbourne; Canada Trust, 650 View Street; or the Ingraham Hotel, 2915 Douglas Street.

Campus Paper 'To Get Out Of Tower'

VANCOUVER (CP) — For 40 years a training ground for some of Canada's best-known newspaper men, the Ubyssey, student paper of the University of British Columbia, is going "to get out of the whole ivory tower thing."

Nate Smith, its editor for the 1970-71 academic year, said in an interview that the paper has begun to look beyond the boundaries of UBC and will devote more coverage to events off-campus."

"The university has encouraged an insular attitude as to what goes on in the university, and does nothing to relate itself with what is going on in the community," said Smith.

MORE COVERAGE

He said The Ubyssey will devote less of its pace to the "petty quarrelling" of the Alma Mater Society, or student council, and other UBC happenings to expand coverage of broader social issues.

The paper last year extended its coverage to unemployed workers' groups, a co-op for ex-convicts, the situation among United States draft dodgers and army deserters, and tenants' rights.

"Student power as such is gone. The students who have been pushing the most for a greater say have realized that it doesn't matter how much power the students have in the university," says Smith.

"The university, they realize now, is simply a part of the larger community. People who belong to the board of governors who oversee UBC's operatioins are many of the same people who control things outside the university."

World Wheat Crop Cut Back

OTTAWA (CP)—This year's wheat crop in Canada and the four other main exporting countries of the Western world may be down by 25 per cent or more from last year's crop, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported today.

It said that the crops in Canada, the United States, France, Australia and Argentina may total 2,614 million bushels or less, compared with about 3,265 million bushels last year. All countries have cut back their wheat acreages, and severe drought conditions have hit Australia and Argentina.

The total decline in production could reach between 650 million and 775 million bushels.

The Canadian crop now is estimated at 338 million bushels, down more than half from last year's 684 million. With a government incentive to take land out of wheat production, Canada's wheat acreage this year is about half last year's.

U.S. CROP DOWN

A harvest of 1,358 million bushels now is predicted for the United States, 101 million bushels less than in 1969. The wheat acreage there was cut by eight per cent, but some increase in yield per acre is expected.

The French crop, becoming important in international trade in recent years, is down about 50 million bushels to 485 million for 1970. The French crop includes durum, but is mostly soft wheat and not directly competitive with Canada's hard wheat.

Led Zeppelin Tops Beatles In Poll

LONDON (UPI) — After eight years at the top of popularity polls, the Beatles have slipped to second place behind the lesser known group, Led Zeppelin, according to a survey conducted by the newspaper Melody Maker.

In the list of the most popular groups, compiled from votes sent in by readers, the Rolling Stones dropped to sixth place.

The most popular British singer, according to the poll, was Led Zepplin's lead singer Robert Plant.

In the international section, Bob Dylan stayed as the top male singer and Joni Mitchell rose to the top of the women's section from eighth position last year.

Canadians Injured

VENICE (Reuters) — Italian police disclosed Tuesday three Canadians were among several hundred persons injured when a freak tornado struck Venice Saturday, killing 37 persons.

The three, who are still in hospital in the nearby town of Mestre but are expected to be released soon, were in a campsite outside Venice when the tornado struck, leaving a trail of devastation.

The Canadians, all women, are Isabel Vok of Fairview, Alta., and Jean Thompson and Maggie Boyce, both of Sarnia, Ont.

BENSON SEEKS NEW TAX TALKS

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister Edgar Benson today suggested another meeting with provincial finance ministers this fall before the government begins to make final decisions on its plan to revise the Income Tax Act.

Sources at the federal-provincial premiers meeting said Benson also promised the premiers and their provincial treasurers he would meet them again next spring, as soon as the government introduces in Parliament its definitive legislation revising the act.

The government now hopes to have its white paper proposals rewritten in the form of draft legislation by next March or April. The finance ministers meeting probably will be held in November or December this year.

The Constitution: They'll Try Again Next Year

Times News Services

Ottawa and the provinces have shifted the emphasis from writing a new Canadian constitution to amending the existing British North America Act.

This was the only major accomplishment of two days of federal-provincial talks in Ottawa ending Tuesday. Agreement was reached to pursue an amending formula at two meetings in 1971 — in February in Ottawa and June in Victoria.

Speed-Up Attempt Endorsed

And there also was general agreement — with no specific pledges — to try to speed-up the whole constitutional review process and "keep the public involved and fully informed of progress."

By renewing the emphasis on an amending formula, the constitutional talks appeared to be reverting to their start when it was decided to leave such a formula until after all other constitutional changes had been agreed on. But Prime Minister Trudeau and most of the premiers discounted such suggestions.

Most of the delegates had supported arguments advanced by Premier John Robarts of Ontario that a formula should be established so that constitutional changes can be made in Canada as they are agreed upon, rather than waiting for the completion of the over-all constitutional review.

Robarts said that agreement on an entirely new constitution will be "a long time coming." Premier Ross Thatcher of Saskatchewan said it wouldn't be in his lifetime.

The last time an amending formula was high in the news was in 1964 when the so-called Fulton-Favreau formula was finally shot down by Quebec after several years of federal-provincial negotiations.

Over-All Review to Continue

But this time, other constitutional matters won't be held up in the process. The over-all review will continue, as now, and Trudeau said that delegations at this conference supported plans to conclude the job "as rapidly as possible."

After five constitutional meetings, all of them with extensive publicity, the leaders appeared sensitive about not having any easily-digestable announcements to make about agreements on specific subjects.

Premier Robarts said Tuesday night it is important that the public realize the complexity of the job and that worthwhile progress is being quickly made in the search for an updated constitution.

Unless some rapid progress is made, said Trudeau, it will be necessary to "dampen the enthusiasm of expectation."

Officials expressed fears privately that unless some concrete results can be pointed out soon, the public will lose all interest in the seemingly endless string of constitutional talks.

Trudeau has said frequently that he favors public involvement in the constitutional review process.

Anti-Pollution Drive Set

Apart from the amending formula, this conference decided to study possible new machinery for handling intergovernmental relations, and also decided to spur on the work of the continuing committee of officials by giving it more specific directions.

In the area of pollution control, said a communique, it was agreed to study the constitutional aspects of environmental management while continuing to co-operate in anti-pollution measures under the existing constitutional arrangements.

Virtually all the premiers ended the constitutional discussions with some degree of satisfaction over the course of events.

Premier Robert Bourassa of Quebec, saying he found the negotiations "satisfactory," also said that his province "is less isolated than I thought."

While Quebec had some specific demands, because of WOODEN PADDLE held by Toronto trustee Graham Scott is used on emotionally-disturbed children at Brant Street School. Trustees were told the use of the paddle was considered "therapeutic reinforcement-type therapy" and was done with the knowledge of school board officials.

Emotionally Disturbed Spanked With Paddle

TORONTO (CP) — A public school principal acknowledged Tuesday he and two teachers had used a plywood paddle to spank emotionally disturbed children and had washed their mouths with soap and water for swearing.

Robert Holmeshaw, former principal of Brant Street public school and now principal of the proposed Oak Street school, told a meeting of the management committee of the board of education that he personally applied the 14-inch paddle.

Ronald Jones, director of the city board of education, told the committee the paddling was considered part of a "therapeutic reinforcement-type therapy" and was done with the knowledge of board officials.

Board rules forbid the use of anything except a strap for corporal punishment. The committee asked that a full report on the incidents at Brant be brought to the board.

Mitchell Lennox, acting assistant superintendent of public schools, told trustees the paddle was reported used 12 times on seven children at the Brant school during the last school year.

These children were in a special rehabilitation class for children aged 6 to 10 with emotional problems. The punishment was administered by the principal or a teacher before the whole class.

USED FOUL LANGUAGE

Mr. Holmeshaw said that in another classroom the children's mouths had been washed with soap and water three times because they used foul language.

"With two of them it worked marvellously—they stopped swearing," he said. "With one it had no effect."

With the paddle he had administered a sharp smack on the buttocks, never more than twice at a time.

Mr. Holmeshaw acknowledged that using the paddle was "bad judgment" but objected to being accused of being "a tyrant and beating kids."

"I wasn't," he said. "I was trying to bring about changes in behavior."

Curtis Urges Strong UBCM To Counteract Weak MLAs

By CLEMENT CHAPPLE
Times Staff

PENTICTON — Mayor Hugh Curtis of Saanich appealed today for a stronger organization of B.C. municipalities to overcome the inadequacy of provincial legislature members who he says don't understand municipal problems.

Curtis, outgoing president of the Union of B.C. Municipalities, said, in his president's report before delegates attending the union's annual convention, that a strong lobby must be formed to fill the provincial government in on municipal problems about which MLAs remain ignorant.

URGES MOVE

Curtis called on delegates to support his suggestion of moving UBCM offices to Victoria from New Westminster, a move which would also strengthen the lobbying power of the union.

The Saanich Mayor added that to be effective, UBCM permanent staff should be enlarged from its four members to meet the increased need.

In his prepared statement, Curtis said "it is somewhat startling to experience, first-hand, the rather profound lack of knowledge among a number of members of the Legislative Assembly with respect to this 'other level' of government."

Curtis did not blame all MLAs directly, saying that the increasing intricacy of municipal operations over the last 15 years has caused the situation. But the result was that "the rank and file provincial representative does not have a clear and concise understanding of local and regional government.

IGNORANCE CITED

Curtis singled out the province's regional government system as an area in which MLAs "on both sides of the house" are ignorant, "and there are some who don't have the slightest background

CANADIAN TO HEAD ENVIRONMENT TALKS

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — Maurice F. Strong, highly regarded head of Canada's international aid program, has been appointed secretary-general of the United Nations conference on human environment in Stockholm in 1972.

Strong, who is president of the Canadian International Development Agency, is expected to take up his new post here Jan. 1.

The UN announced Wednesday that with the rank of UN under secretary-general he will assume principal responsibility for environmental affairs with his chief job being to prepare for the Stockholm conference.

Until Jan. 1, he will act in a consultative capacity as UN Secretary-General U Thant's principal adviser on economic affairs.

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP)—Intrepid was declared the winner today of the first yacht race for the America's Cup after the race committe dismissed a protest of Australia's Gretel II. See also Page 14.

The triumph officially gave the American yacht a 1-0 lead in the best-of-seven series which resumes Thursday.

Army Officers Taking Over

Times News Services

AMMAN — King Hussein today fired his civilian cabinet and replaced it with loyal army officers who immediately declared martial law in Jordan.

Rebel guerrilla forces meanwhile united under extremist Yasser Arafat and pledged to fight the new regime to the end. The guerrillas are seeking all-out war against Israel while the Hussein regime is trying for a peace pact.

Arafat did not order an offensive but ordered his men to defy an order by King Hussein's new government and refuse to surrender their arms.

As the crisis deepened in Jordan, a top-level United States force, including the chairman of the joint chiefs of staff and President Nixon's national security adviser, met in Washington to consider the developments.

The Jordanian military government is headed by Brig. Mohammed Daoud, a Palestinian born near Jerusalem.

But the real power was invested in Field Marshal Habis Majali, British-trained Arab Legion officer, who was named military governor of the entire country.

With Middle East peace prospects looking dimmer by the hour, Israeli Premier Golda Meir flew to the United States today for talks with Nixon and other top U.S. officials.

DISCUSS SITUATION

She and Nixon were expected to discuss the Israeli military requests that triggered Egypt's denunciation of the United States.

Official sources reported Daoud said early today that the military government wanted to implement the latest ceasefire agreements with the guerrillas.

Observers in the Jordanian capital said it seemed clear that if the guerrillas rejected the olive branch, the new military government would not hesitate to move against them in a bid to end the government-commando crises once and for all.

Such a step could bring Jordan — already in a state of near-anarchy — into virtual civil war.

City Father Cries Foul

TORONTO (CP) — Ald. Robert Yuill has been voted the "most useless" member of North York borough council in a contest he called "reprehensible and irresponsible."

Mayor Basil Hall came a close second in the contest held by the borough's Liberal youth committee and the Citizen's Committee for Change.

Price Index Holds In August

OTTAWA (CP) — The consumer price index stood at 130.5 for August, the same as in July but 2.8 per cent higher than the August, 1969, figure of 126.9.

Long Strike Feared; Bargaining Delayed

DETROIT (AP) — Leonard Woodcock, United Auto Workers president, planned picket-line visits to rally union members today as the prospect loomed larger that the General Motors strike may be a long one.

Serious bargaining was postponed until Tuesday, union sources said, although both sides were to meet briefly today to work out an agenda for future talks.

The UAW had pulled nearly 344,000 workers off their jobs in Canada and the United States Tuesday in support of new contract demands.

Production continued at Ford Motor Co. and Chrysler Corp., where contracts also have expired but which have been granted at least temporary strike immunity by the UAW.

Whatever terms are reached at GM will set a pattern for settlements at Ford and Chrysler.

The union and the automaker put the price tag of the strike at more than $118 million a day, including lost wages and sales.

Meanwhile, at GM's car assembly plant at St. Therese, Que., workers said they are having no problems getting extra jobs in the bush or at a federal airport construction site 20 miles north.

Harold Wakefield, corporate manager of Duplate of Canada which employs 1,000 persons at its Oshawa and Hawkesbury plants, said most of its output of glass goes to GM and "if our customer is on strike that pretty well shuts us down."

TOT FINDS GUN, KILLS NEIGHBOR

HURST, Ill. (UPI) — A 3-year-old boy who found a loaded .22 calibre target pistol on the floorboard of his father's car shot a neighbor to death Tuesday night and wounded a boy.

Authorities said Roger Tennyson, 21, was struck four times by bullets fired by Jimmy Hawk.

David Tackett, 12, was struck in the hip by one bullet and was admitted to Holden Hospital at Carbondale.

Authorities said the Hawk boy fired all six shots in the pistol as Tennyson and Tackett approached him and tried to talk him into putting the gun down.

The boy had wandered into Tennyson's yard after finding the gun in the car of his father, Allen Hawk.
